

New Summer Schedule on U. & D.

Sunday the new summer schedule will go into effect on the Ulster & Delaware railroad. The change of time will be noted in the company's advertisement found in another column of The Freeman.

U. S. ULTIMATUM TO CARRANZA GOVERNMENT

IMMEDIATE RELEASE OF PRISONERS DEMANDED

By Telegram to The Freeman. Washington, June 24.—An ultimatum demanding the immediate release of the troopers of the Tenth Cavalry taken prisoners in the treacherous attack upon two troops of the Tenth U. S. Cavalry by Mexicans under General Gomez at Carranza has been sent to General Carranza at Mexico City. These men must immediately be turned over to General Pershing by the Mexican authorities.

COMPANY PARADES UPTOWN STREETS

Flag-bedecked streets and the martial strains of Muller's band added a patriotic note to the parade of Company M through the uptown section Friday night and the sidewalks were fairly packed with humanity which evidenced the utmost enthusiasm. Particularly did the recruits get a share of the handclapping as they brought up the rear in excellent formation.

CARRIZAL REPORTS NOT EXAGGERATED

Believed That Two Cavalry Troops Were Practically Wiped Out by Mexicans--Complete Report Still Being Awaited.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Washington, June 24.—With troops concentrating on the border from every section of the country the Mexican situation was increasingly menacing today. A wave of horror is passing over official circles as the full realization of the treachery which practically wiped out Troops C and K of the Tenth Cavalry at Carrizal is brought home by the official reports now coming from General Pershing.

Contributing toward the expense of the band were Admiral Francis J. Higginson, E. T. Stelle and Son, W. H. Rider, C. V. L. Pitts and Sons, Costello and Dugan, W. Scott Gillespie, Rose, Gorman and Rose, The Ostrander and Woolsey, E. A. Abrahamson, Aaron Cohen, D. N. Kahn, John E. Mahan, G. A. Hart and Co., Forsyth and Davis and Ralph Cohen. The Kingston musicians gave their services gratis and the contributions went toward the expenses of the out of town musicians hired.

MORE MEN NEEDED FOR COMPANY M

Still Lacks a Dozen Men to Bring it Up to Full War Strength--Recruiting Parties Sent Out Through the County to Enlist Men.

The sooner the ranks of company M are filled up to 150, full war strength, the quicker the company will go to the border is the belief of the veterans among the men and every effort is to be made to get more young men from this city and vicinity. The company now lacks a dozen of its full war strength of 150 men.

Today John D. Schoonmaker's big automobile was donated for the recruiting service and Captain Everett Fowler of the Depot Company started out for recruits under Class A. With him went Private Stewart and Recruit Horstall, who will aid in rounding up young men.

Five New Recruits. Recruits accepted up to noon today included Alward Brink, Saugerties; William Myers, Kingston; Michael S. Walsh, White Plains; Arthur T. Mesereau, New York and Kingston; Louis Davis, Kingston.

The company is now up to 136 men and all but two or three are equipped with uniforms, and rifles will soon be forthcoming for the remainder of the contingent.

The posting of a notice in the Martin Cantine paper mills at Saugerties to the effect that each enlistee would have his full pay paid while in service will, it is believed, stimulate enlistment in Saugerties. The Cantine Company has already furnished three of the men already recruited in Company M.

Flying squadrons of guardsmen will be organized for canvassing the country Monday if the Company is still on duty at the Armory.

Automobile Club to Help.

All members of the Automobile Club of Ulster county who are willing to donate the use of their cars to the recruiting officers of Company M to make trips in search of recruits are requested to notify Dr. Meinhardt, the secretary, so that he can communicate with the officers when they are in need of automobiles.

Fourteenth at Peekskill. By Telegram to The Freeman. New York, June 24.—The Fourteenth Regiment of state troops, known as the "Red Legged Devils," went to the Peekskill Rifle Range today to practice for three days before going into camp at Peekskill.

has yet been made upon General Carranza for the release of the 24 troopers of the Tenth taken prisoners in the Carrizal fight. State department officials, however, say that no such action can be taken until the complete official report of what transpired is available from American sources. Action cannot be taken upon the Mexican accounts, but as soon as the facts are established from the standpoint of this government action is promised. However, the majority of officials here believe that long before diplomatic measures can be carried through to completion a state of war will prevail.

COMPANY M PART OF REGULAR ARMY

Officers and Members Sworn Into Federal Service Today and Now Await Orders of General Leonard Wood for Movement to Mexican Border or to Camp.

Company M today belongs to the regulars, its members being sworn in this morning by the officers after Major George Chandler had administered the federal oath to Captain Meagher, First Lieutenant Dittus, Second Lieutenant Cashion and Captain Cranston, the medical examiner. The guardsmen are now enlisted men and a part of the National Guard of the United States, subject to the immediate disposition of President Wilson and the war department.

Major Chandler took the oath of allegiance to the nation Friday night before Chief of Police J. Allan Wood, a former military man as well as a notary public.

New Oath of Officers.

Company M thus loses its identity as a state militia organization and becomes part of an infantry regiment in the federal service, awaiting assignment to duty. The oath taken by the officers in substance is as follows:

"I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of New York against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States and of the Governor of the State of New York; that I make this obligation without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of (title of officer) in the National Guard of the United States and of the State of New York upon which I am about to enter, so help me God."

The blank form bears date of approval by the Adjutant General under date of June 19, 1916.

The oath taken by the private soldiers is about the same as heretofore with the National Guard of the United States being added and the president of the United States also added to the governor of the state as the acknowledged authority.

It was said today at the armory that to all intents and purposes the officers are unattached as well as the company and may be moved as part of some other regiment than the Tenth either into camp or the Mexican border as the Washington authorities may decide.

CHAMPIONSHIP WON BY GROVE WEBSTER

He Won Individual Bowling Championship Friday by Scoring 585 Pins in Three Games--Will Receive Gold Medal.

Friday the individual championships in the Business Men's Bowling League were rolled off on the Y. M. C. A. alleys and Grove Webster proved the best bowler in the league by scoring 585 pins in three games. He will be awarded a gold medal. The other contestants and their scores were: Theodore Wood, 511 pins; Charles DeForest, 522 pins; Louis Deere, 510 pins; Pardee, 518 pins; Fred Dressel, 465 pins; Keresman, 544 pins.

In the Y. M. C. A. Church Bowling League the team of the Albany Baptist Church defeated the team of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church by a score of 2,209 to 2,027 pins.

DIRECT WIRE TO CAMP WHITMAN

That events in the New York state camp will be fully covered by The Freeman without the loss of a minute was made more certain today when a direct wire from Camp Whitman to The Freeman office was established. Should the Tenth Regiment go to Camp Whitman this service will be of great value to the people of Ulster county. This news service, of course, be supplemented by special correspondence from Company M while it is in the service.

To Attend Zion Conference.

The Rev. John T. Mathews, pastor of the Franklin Street A. M. E. Zion Church, will leave on Wednesday of next week to attend the New York conference of the A. M. E. Zion Church, that meets at Troy, N. Y.

FINDS COMPANIES GAINING RAPIDLY

Other Units of Third Battalion Increasing at More Rapid Rate Than Company M Major Chandler Finds--Automobile Canvass to be Made Over Ulster County.

Major George Chandler returned late Friday night from an inspection of the three companies of the Third Battalion, Tenth Regiment, in Poughkeepsie, Hudson and Catskill, and was enthusiastic at the showings made by the companies in those places. In Poughkeepsie, Company K, which at the beginning of mobilization had but 67 members, is now recruited up to 136, which is even with Company M of Kingston.

Catskill, which has but 6,000 population to draw from, is recruited up to more than 90, having lost three members on account of the rigors of the medical examination which was conducted by Captain Cranston, who accompanied the major on his battalion inspection. This record of 1 1/2 per cent of the population enlisted pleases Major Chandler exceedingly and the showing at Hudson, one-third the size of Kingston, where Company F is up to 127 and gaining new recruits every day. Newburgh has two full companies in the First Regiment, each up to 160 men, full war strength.

"What is the question with Ulster county?" was the question on the lips of several officers today and they propose to find out by starting an energetic automobile canvass of the county with machines commandeered from members of the Automobile Club of Ulster county. The use of which has already been offered through Dr. H. F. Meinhardt.

Not Proved They Threatened.

After a lively trial in recorder's court before Recorder Lang this morning the court found John Zowna and Peter Zubzysky, charged with threatening to kill two women employees at the J. Davis Company's factory on upper Broadway, with death not guilty and discharged them. J. Cook appeared in behalf of Mr. Davis while W. H. Grogan appeared for the two defendants. It was claimed that they had made the alleged threats if the two women did not go out on strike. For some time past efforts have been made to stir up a strike at the Davis factory, but so far they have proved unsuccessful.

MEXICANS BELIEVE AMERICANS AFRAID

Barfoot Soldiers of Carranza Believe the U. S. Seeks to Scare Them—Lack of Aeroplanes Worries Army Officers.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
El Paso, Texas, June 24.—Unless there is a marked change for the better in the situation very shortly, an American army of invasion will take Juarez within a week and very shortly thereafter move southward down the railway line in Mexico to Villa Ahumada and Chihuahua City. This well-founded report was spread broadcast along the border today and even crossed the Rio Grande into Juarez itself.

There is aroused the anger and defiance of the Mexican leaders. This formal defiance was issued by Andres Garcia, Carranza consul in El Paso, who has spent most of his time in Juarez since the situation became acute.

"If it is the plan to attack Juarez, the American army will find us ready. We are not going to give up without a fight that will give a new idea of the ability of Mexico's soldiers. Every one of our citizens is ready to take up arms."

While Garcia was thus defying the might of the United States, Carranza soldiers, with rifles ready and machine guns unmasked, took up their position at the Mexican end of the international bridge. They were grim evidences that the Mexicans intend to fight. Indeed, there was no doubt of this intention on the border after the Mexican government assumed responsibility for the attack on American soldiers at Carrizal. This assumption removed the issue from the field of diplomacy.

Tension on the American side of the border has never been so acute. Up to the time this despatch was written only seven men were known to have escaped the Mexican ambush at Carrizal. The continued absence of news from the rest of the 70 or 80 men attacked by the force of General Gomez lent strength to the fear that almost all had been destroyed.

American military officers were sitting tight but they did not conceal the fact that a crisis was at hand. The move on Juarez may come any time within a week. The advance into the interior will take more time because of the lack of troops to support the line of communications and maintain a patrol on the border.

Upon the rapidly with which state militia forces reach the border depends the progress of the American campaign.

The officers at Fort Bliss have already received their instructions. The high commanders deny that any advance into Mexico will be made until a Mexican military force makes a hostile demonstration against El Paso, but it can be stated that only some sudden reversal of attitude on the part of the American government can change the plans that have been made.

The campaign has been thoroughly mapped out even to the dropping of a shell that will sever the railroad at the point where it crosses the first hills in back of Juarez. The militia will have to take up the work of the regulars in safeguarding the communicating line and protecting the border from the back fire of raiding Mexicans after hostilities really are opened.

First militia forces from the better equipped states are expected in the 21 Paso district within the next few days. Officers are eager for the arrival of such troops as the First Cavalry of the Illinois National Guard, the assistance of which is expected to be invaluable. It is probable that the cavalry will have the first real opportunity of the state guards for action. Its reputation as a splendidly equipped and trained force is known in the regular army.

Today General Bell, in command at Fort Bliss, issued a statement declaring that yesterday's sudden calling of troops for maneuvers was just practice march—a sort of military drill. At the same time he took care to deny the story of the intended move on Juarez.

"There is not the slightest foundation for the story that the army is going to take Juarez," he said. The circulation of this story has caused wild excitement in Juarez and might have caused the Mexicans to omit some overt act. We have no orders to occupy Juarez or make any hostile demonstrations against the Mexicans."

He was asked if it was not possible that yesterday's "practice march" might have inspired some overt act.

"There's no reason why it should," said General Bell.

"The movement yesterday was just a practice march and maneuver. There may be expected to occur."

On the Mexican side of the Rio Grande they put a typical Mexican construction on the failure of the army to cross after it had been assembled.

"The Americans are afraid of us," said one of the barefooted soldiers. Carranza who has been on guard the bridge. "They tried to scare us. Then they found we weren't frightened and they turned and ran back to their kennels."

This impression was not discouraged by the Mexican command. For a long time they have been heartening their men with stories that the Americans are afraid and hundreds of Mexican troops actually believe it.

The lack of aeroplanes is causing a great worry to the officers who are aware of the plans to move into Mexico. It is known that sky outs have been requested from the government, but for some reason or other there has been no response.

Despite Garcia's defiance, it seems quite likely that the first real fighting will be encountered back of the hills of Juarez where it is reported that the garrison that "evacuated" with such ostentatious secrecy is taking positions to harass the American advance.

Against them, from El Paso and through Juarez, the army may send 4,000 or 5,000 men. This, providing that the militiamen arrive to take up the supply guard and border patrol. General Pershing, from his main position at Namiquipa, may send over 3,000 more men for the big engagement.

Already General Pershing has sent a supporting column after the two Eleventh Cavalry squadrons that went to the relief of the survivors of the Carrizal trap. Still no word has been received from the relief expedition. Chihuahua reports indicate that seven more Americans have been taken there as prisoners making 21 captured in all.

VIVID DESCRIPTION OF VERDUN BATTLE

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Petrograd, June 24.—Vassili Nemirovitch-Danchenko, a veteran Russian newspaper man, sends the following description of the battle of Verdun to his paper here:

"Commencing from Bar-le-Duc the country is a continuous military camp. The entire country lives only for the war. Military supplies stretch for dozens of versts. Wagons with munitions wend their way without end; there are shells on the platforms, shells on the ground. A French general said to me: 'To every shell of the Boches we must reply with four.'"

"The splendid roads are kept up by battalions formed of diggers. Equipment could not be better even in peace time. An abundance of specialists of every kind is evident everywhere in the French army. Everything is foreseen. Scouting is ideal."

"I am writing you separately about aviation. Here it immeasurably surpasses German aviation. The sky in all directions is intersected by these hunting birds."

"At Bar-le-Duc all habitations are occupied. The population of Verdun has sought refuge here. The commandant said to me: 'My population has increased five times.'"

Verdun is empty. Part of this beautiful old town is in ruins. The vaulting corners of the houses look as though they had been gnawed by gigantic jaws. Every day 500 shells fall into the martyr town. In the Cathedral, the magnificent stained-glass windows, the work of the great masters of the middle ages, are smashed. Not a single window remains intact. A priest in military uniform and a helmet, with grief and despair showed us his ruined treasures.

"Verdun is honeycombed with subterranean galleries, and no Boche gun can destroy them. In the galleries electricity burns and incessant work proceeds. Hundreds of workmen are here engaged. The subterranean daily bakeries produce thousands of loaves."

"The entire town rumbles like a thunder cloud, and like a thunder cloud is sending north, south and east innumerable lightnings. Its batteries roar without intermission. The entire heavenly vault is pockmarked with shrapnel explosions."

"Thanks to their incomparable reconnaissance and their special apparatus the construction of which I have not the right to describe, the French know every movement of the Boches. The incessant French artillery fire scatters death and destruction in the German trenches. Yesterday a clever shot brought down five German Albatrosses, which fell in the French lines; this morning there were two more."

"From a height which I must not name we looked at the positions, drenched in the fire of sunset. The case was adjourned until a week from today to give the attorney general an opportunity to have a representative present in court."

As far as known this is the first case of its kind to arise since the motorcycle law went into effect. Under the new law any one riding a motorcycle must first secure a license from the state. The point in this case is whether the attaching of a motor to a bicycle transforms the bicycle into a motorcycle or not.

The determination of this point is of utmost interest to all owners of these small motor attachments.

"We pass through the town cemetery. No sign of life is observable in the silence of the dead streets. The sentries, like apparitions, emerge from the ruins and approach us."

"That night we had proof of the astonishing capacity for resistance of the incomparable army of our allies. Unexpectedly, from the direction of Malancourt, was heard all the frenzied howl of guns and the ceaseless cracking of rifles. The Germans took the village. Insignificant on the whole, with ten regiments. It was defended only by a battalion with orders to hold out as long as possible and then retreat. The battalion fought bravely and surrounded its positions with heaps of German corpses."

"General Petain's plan consisted in compelling the foe to pay with enormous losses for a position of small importance. Malancourt was taken, but a hetacomb of Germans was formed. They came on like waves of the ocean, which broke against the iron walls of the French. The fabric may be any of the novelty velours, mohair or gabardine. Here is a coat shown in dark brown velours, the notable feature of which is the belted waistline and full raglan sleeves. The collar is reversible."

"A pessimist's Optimistic View. 'Are you looking forward to the summer with pleasant anticipations?' asked the optimistic citizen. 'Yes, indeed,' replied the pessimistic person. 'A great many people I'm tired of looking at will go out of town for the summer.'"

"Where did you get this wonderful follow up system? It would get money out of anybody."

"I simply compiled and adapted the letters my son sent me from college."—Pittsburgh Post.

IS MOTOR WHEEL A MOTORCYCLE?

Charles McMillan, 12 Years Old, Charged with Riding Motor Wheel Without License—When is a Motorcycle Not a Motorcycle?

The arrest of Charles McMillan, 12 years old, on Friday afternoon by Policeman Daun, on a charge of riding a bicycle with a motor attachment, without first securing a motorcycle license from the state, has raised a novel question as to whether a bicycle with such an attachment comes under the provisions of the motorcycle law, or not. The charge is also made that the boy is under sixteen years of age.

Chris J. Flanagan represented the boy when he was arraigned before Recorder Lang late that afternoon. The case was adjourned until a week from today to give the attorney general an opportunity to have a representative present in court.

As far as known this is the first case of its kind to arise since the motorcycle law went into effect. Under the new law any one riding a motorcycle must first secure a license from the state. The point in this case is whether the attaching of a motor to a bicycle transforms the bicycle into a motorcycle or not.

FINE CONCERT GIVEN.

By Miss Bunting and Miss Glen, Pianists, and Miss Los Kamp, Soloist.

One of the finest musical evenings in some time was that given on Friday evening in the chapel of the Rondout Presbyterian Church by Miss Ida Marie Bunting and Miss Mary Catherine Glen, pianists, graduates of the New England Conservatory of Music, and Miss Virginia Los Kamp, the contralto soloist of the church. Not only was the recital a success artistically, but financially, for every seat was taken before the program started.

Miss Bunting and Miss Glen opened the program with "Variations on Theme," for two pianos, by Beethoven and Saint Saens, and the selection was played in a masterly manner. It has been a long time since the novelty of two-piano selections has been heard at a concert, and the artistic work of the young women made it a most enjoyable one.

Miss Los Kamp gave a group of songs, "Dawn in the Desert," "Requiem" and "Lift Thine Eyes," and in response to a hearty encore sang "The Rosary." She was never in better voice and all four songs were rendered with skill and ease, her pure tones showing to fine advantage in her selections.

Miss Glen played the difficult "Ballade, A Flat Major," by Chopin, with the highest skill, and was heartily encored.

Probably one of the finest numbers on the program was "Romance and Waltz" for two pianos, by Arensky, which was followed by "Andante and Scherzetto," by Chaminade. These two numbers were a fine example of the artistry of Miss Bunting and Miss Glen, and they were forced to respond to an encore.

Miss Los Kamp in her second group of songs sang "The Star," "Mother Dear," and "Sing to Me, Sing." She was forced to respond to an encore.

Miss Bunting then played "Hark, Hark, the Lark," a song transcription by Schubert-Liszt, and the "Spinning Song, from the Flying Dutchman." Both selections were played with an artistry and skill that is seldom equalled.

The exceptionally fine program was brought to a close with the "Rhapsody Espana" for two pianos played by Miss Bunting and Miss Glen. By many it was considered the finest number on the program.

Miss Bunting is a resident of this city, while Miss Glen is a resident of Spokane, Washington. Both young women showed that they were musicians of the highest type, and are to be congratulated on the rendering of one of the best musical programs given in this city in a long time. Miss Los Kamp also came in for her share of praise, but her solo work is always good, and the mere fact that she participated in the program was an assurance of the excellence of the music.

The musical was given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Circles of the church.

Essay on the Duck.

A prize essay on "The Duck" was written by a Michigan schoolgirl and printed in the Detroit Journal.

"The duck is a low heavy bird. He is a mighty poor singer, having a coarse voice caused by getting so many frogs in his neck and he likes the water and carries a toy balloon in his stomach to keep from sinking. The duck has only two legs and they are set so far back on his running gears by nature that they come pretty near missing his body some ducks when they get big curls on their tails are called drakes and don't have to set or hatch but just loaf and go swimming and eat everything in sight if I were to be a duck I would rather be a drake they have a wide bill like they use it for a spade they walk like a drunk man they bounce and bump about from side to side if you scare them they will flap their wings and try to make a pass at singing."

Better Than Some.

Myer—"This paper tells of a spinner in Vermont who quarries stone like a man." Gyer—"Well, I suppose she thinks a stone man is better than none."

Here is a coat shown in dark brown velours, the notable feature of which is the belted waistline and full raglan sleeves. The collar is reversible."

"A pessimist's Optimistic View. 'Are you looking forward to the summer with pleasant anticipations?' asked the optimistic citizen. 'Yes, indeed,' replied the pessimistic person. 'A great many people I'm tired of looking at will go out of town for the summer.'"

"Where did you get this wonderful follow up system? It would get money out of anybody."

KINGSTON, N. Y., JUNE 24, 1916.

Economic conditions affect patriotism to an unmistakable degree and the unwillingness of the family man to perform service for his country in the militia or in the field is most understandable when one stops to reflect what the pay envelope means to those dependent upon his earning capacity. And, too, a soldier cannot take any especial pride in assistance given by outsiders, whether relief organizations whose objects are more patriotic than charitable, or charity institutions themselves. Some of the larger corporations, together with smaller business houses that can ill afford it, have arranged to continue the wages of employees in whole or in part during the time the latter are in the government service. This is a commendable proposition although in some of the larger concerns such burden is a negligible percentage of their pay rolls while in smaller establishments the proportion may be very much higher and the burden consequently far heavier. The problem appears to be best handled by the federal government in the resolution passed by the house providing $1,000,000 for the relief of those dependent upon soldiers, the provision including brothers and sisters under 14 years as well as wives or parents. This seems the most satisfactory form of adjusting the economic scale so seriously tilted by a wage earner's enlistment. The senate should take similar action and provide for further installments of the appropriation as a million is hardly a starter where very many thousands of men are concerned even though only a small proportion may actually need such co-operation.

Two near-homicides can be credited to sentiment at Sing Sing this week when Oreste Shillitani, awaiting execution in the death house, nearly murdered two guards in a desperate though unsuccessful endeavor to escape. Reform methods in prison procedure were entirely responsible for the affair. Some time ago under the Osborne-Kirchwey system of reform by wrist-slapping the guards were compelled to give up their firearms. Following this action, four months ago it was decided that the sight of a night stick was too brutalizing for the prisoners, and, hence, the guards were left with their two fists and whatever knowledge of the pugilistic art they may have acquired to enforce prison rules. That was the situation when Shillitani, armed with a revolver smuggled in by a visitor, made a break for liberty and shot down the two guards who faced the maddened convict in a death house corridor. That the men stopped Shillitani is more of a credit to their courage than to state prison discipline. The spectacle of guards not even armed with nigh sticks is a sample of pacifism, one nutty. It is high time that a change was tried in Sing Sing methods. "Kind words butter no parsnips" and kind words capture no criminals either in our humble estimation.

"PORK."

If Congress should appropriate $50,000 to $75,000 for a post office building at Pine Hill; $75,000 each for similar buildings at Rifton and Marlborough; and $100,000 for buildings at New Paltz and Rosendale, there would be strong criticism which would be justly deserved. At the same ratio of population to appropriation, Ellenville would receive in excess of $200,000 and Saugerties would receive about $300,000. The villages mentioned are the incorporated villages of Ulster county. In all of them the space used for post office purposes is rented; there is no need of a public building and any demand for such a building in any of the villages would meet with derision and a careful scrutiny for the "nigger in the woodpile." In view of the conditions in Ulster county, it is surprising to study the appropriations for post office buildings in small villages in the South and West which are in the general Public Buildings Bill. The New York Times, which is supporting President Wilson, publishes editorially without comment a list of sixteen appropriation bills for post office buildings, with the population of the places which are to be so favored, the post office receipts from the present offices, and the amount of the appropriation, as follows:

Grand Canyon, Ariz.	290	5,312	25,000
Belleville, Ky.	310	1,141	75,000
Louis, Va.	318	5,084	50,000
Franklin, N. C.	370	4,433	75,000
Webster Springs, W. Va.	500	2,382	150,000
Manos, Col.	567	4,040	50,000
Saunderville, S. D.	638	7,658	90,000
Pembina, N. D.	717	2,927	75,000
Greenville, Ga.	900	2,848	90,000
Clayton, N. M.	970	7,848	125,000
Brooksville, Fla.	979	5,568	100,000
Holley, Idaho	1,201	6,023	100,000
Seneca, N. C.	1,313	5,280	100,000
Pawnee, Okla.	2,161	8,714	200,000

For purposes of comparison, the population of the incorporated villages in Ulster county according to the last Federal census is herewith given, as follows:

Pine Hill	417
Rifton	745
Marlborough	920
New Paltz	1,125
Ellenville	1,230
Saugerties	3,114
	5,929

Looking over the list published in The Times, it should be apparent to everyone that a Congressional investigation of these appropriations is needed immediately. The appropriations are inconsistent for one thing. Why should McKee, Ky., with 146 population, have $75,000 when Grand Canyon, Ariz., with a population of 299—more than double McKee—receive only $25,000, unless it be that more tourists visit Grand Canyon and the scandal of a $75,000 appropriation there would become spread wider and quicker? Why should Saunderville, Cal., with annual receipts of $7,958 receive a paltry $60,000 when Webster Springs, West Virginia, with receipts of $2,362 gets $150,000, unless the West Virginia village was named after Daniel Webster and the Democratic party is trying to reward patriotism?

With Congressional pork barrel appropriations mounting up to the neighborhood of forty million dollars, is it not time for a change in the administrative government of the United States?

The Come-Back.

A lad went into a baker's shop in Dublin to buy a two-penny loaf. Having received it, it struck him that it was underweight, so he drew the baker's attention to it. "Never mind that," said the baker, "it will be less for you to carry." "Very well," replied the boy, and throwing a halfpenny on the counter he walked away. The shopman called after him and told him he had not left enough money. "Oh, never mind that," retorted the smart Irish lad. "It will be less for you to count."—Philadelphia Star.

He Blames the People.

A pacifist said at a dinner: "I find that the people themselves, not the capitalists, are to blame for the continuance of war. With this specious excuse and that, the people reject universal peace."

"In short, the people treat pacifism as the pretty girl treated the shipping clerk."

"No, I can't marry you," she said to the shipping clerk after he had proposed. "You see, you are too extravagant."

"Me extravagant?" shouted the shipping clerk. "Me? Why, on the contrary, I'm the poorest one. I'm very economical. I have to be."

"Then more than ever I feel," she said, "that I cannot be your wife."

"You can't be my wife because I'm economical," he gasped, bewildered by her shifts and changes.

"No; oh, dear, no," she answered. "But because you have to be."—New York World.

In Darkest London.

A London newspaper, dealing recently with the question of London's darkness, urged that all constables carry red lamps on their belts, and thus "prevent suburban residents from trying to post letters in shadowy and stationary policemen late at night." We cannot believe that any suburban resident would be anxious of making such a mistake with a policeman, says a writer in The Christian Science Monitor. Now a Chelsea pensioner in his summer coat of red is quite another matter. He does indeed straightway become a snare and a pitfall in this regard. We have never actually attempted to post a letter in a Chelsea pensioner; but later by side with a pillar box there is very little to choose between on a dark night.

Oak and Mushroom.

Major General Arthur Murray said at a dinner in San Francisco: "Some people reproach England because the German army has proved to be a better one than hers. But the German army had been preparing for this war for 40 years, and the English army had only about 10 minutes to prepare for it."

"The English navy is all right. It is superior, far superior, to the German navy. There, you see, the long and thorough preparation was on England's side."

"Long and thorough preparation, short and shallow preparation—efficiency is all a question of that."

General Murray shrugged.

"When God," he said, "wants to make a magnificent oak, he takes a hundred years, but he only takes an hour or so to make a mushroom."—Los Angeles Times.

The "New Idea" Cabinet

"Your own idea of what a kitchen cabinet ought to be"

The Latest Kitchen Cabinet Achievement

Revolving Flour Bin

Roller Curtains in Base

This, the Sellers Kitcheneed "New Idea," is the latest, most perfect achievement of the organization making "your own idea of what a kitchen cabinet ought to be." It has been over twenty-five years developing.

It possesses more patented, practically useful convenience features than ever any kitchen cabinet made.

The "New Idea" Flour Bin is the most sanitary, practical and simply constructed bin ever put on a Sellers Kitcheneed. A simple problem in physics producing a perfect balance enables a woman to fill the bin with fifty pounds of flour in the position you see it here, and return to its original position without effort. It is easily removed for thorough cleaning, and on account of its construction, cannot cake with flour.

The Sellers Kitcheneed Roll Curtain Lifter in the base—by simply bringing the handle across the front of the base the roll curtain is lifted, permitting the easiest access to the base compartment. It is not necessary to stoop and lift the curtain from the bottom.

There are other convenience details, many of them, that are a part of the Sellers Kitcheneed "New Idea." These mentioned are significant of the value of the rest. To conserve a woman's strength and, incidentally and importantly, her youth, has been among the chief motives for the designing of this new Sellers Kitcheneed.

MEXICANS BELIEVE AMERICANS AFRAID

Barefoot Soldiers of Carranza Believe the U. S. Seeks to Scare Them—Lack of Aeroplanes Worries Army Officers.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
El Paso, Texas, June 24.—Unless there is a marked change for the better in the situation very shortly, an American army of invasion will take Juarez within a week and very shortly thereafter move southward down the railway line in Mexico to Villa Ahumada and Chihuahua City. This well-founded report was spread broadcast along the border today and even crossed the Rio Grande into Juarez itself.

There is aroused the anger and defiance of the Mexican leaders. This formal defiance was issued by Andres Garcia, Carranza consul in El Paso, who has spent most of his time in Juarez since the situation became acute.

It is the plan to attack Juarez, the American army will find out without a fight that will give a new idea of the ability of Mexico's soldiers. Every one of our citizens is ready to take up arms.

While Garcia was thus defying the might of the United States, Carranza soldiers, with rifles ready and machine guns unmasked, took up their position at the Mexican end of the international bridge. They were grim evidences that the Mexicans intend to fight. Indeed, there was no doubt of this intention on the border after the Mexican government assumed responsibility for the attack upon American soldiers at Carrizal. This assumption removed the issue from the field of diplomacy.

Tension on the American side of the border has never been so acute. Up to the time this despatch was written only seven men were known to have escaped the Mexican ambush at Carrizal. The continued absence of news from the rest of the 70 or 80 men attacked by the force of General Gomez lent strength to the fear that almost all had been destroyed.

American military officers were sitting tight but they did not conceal the fact that a crisis was at hand.

The move on Juarez may come any time within a week. The advance into the interior will take more time because of the lack of troops to support the line of communications and maintain a patrol on the border. Upon the rapidly with which state militia forces reach the border depends the progress of the American campaign.

The officers at Fort Bliss have already received their instructions. The high commanders deny that any advance into Mexico will be made until a Mexican military force makes a hostile demonstration against El Paso but it can be stated that only some sudden reversal of attitude on the part of the American government can change the plans that have been made.

The campaign has been thoroughly mapped out even to the dropping of the shell that will sever the railroad line at the point where it crosses the first hills in back of Juarez.

The move will have to take up the work of the regulars in safeguarding the communicating line and protecting the border from the back fire of raiding Mexicans after hostilities really are opened.

First militia forces from the better equipped states are expected in the El Paso district within the next few days. Officers are eager for the arrival of such troops as the First Cavalry of the Illinois National Guard, the assistance of which is expected to be invaluable. It is probable that the cavalry will have the first real opportunity of the state guards for action. Its reputation as a splendidly equipped and trained force is known in the regular army.

Today General Bell, in command at Fort Bliss, issued a statement declaring that yesterday's sudden calling of troops for maneuvers was just a practice march—a sort of military fire drill. At the same time he took occasion to deny the story of the intended move on Juarez.

"There is not the slightest foundation for the story that the army is going to take Juarez," he said. "The circulation of this story has caused much excitement in Juarez and might have caused the Mexicans to commit some overt act. We have no orders to occupy Juarez or make any invasion. Nor have we orders to make any hostile demonstrations against the Mexicans."

He was asked if it was not possible that yesterday's "practice march" might have inspired some overt act.

"There is no reason why it should," said General Bell.

"The movement yesterday was just a practice march and maneuver. These may be expected again."

On the Mexican side of the Rio Grande they put a typical Mexican construction on the failure of the army to cross after it had been assembled.

"The Americans are afraid of us," said one of the barefooted soldiers of Carranza who has been on guard at the bridge. "They tried to scare us. Then they found we weren't frightened and they turned and ran back to their kennels."

This impression was not discouraged by the Mexican commanders. For a long time they have been heartening their men with stories that the Americans are "afraid" and hundreds of Mexican troops actually believe it.

The lack of aeroplanes is causing the greatest worry to the officers who are aware of the plans to move into Mexico. It is known that sky scouts have been requested from the government, but for some reason or other there has been no response.

This, despite the lesson learned at Carrizal, where a single scout plane might have avoided the trapping of the tenth soldiers or at least had news of the treachery back to Pershing within a couple of hours.

If the aeroplane is the eye of the modern army, the United States army seems quite blind.

Despite Garcia's defiance, it seemed quite likely that the first real fighting will be encountered back of the hills of Juarez where it is reported that the garrison that "evacuated" with such ostentatious secrecy is taking positions to harass the American advance.

Passing through this, the American troops may expect their first real battle at Villa Ahumada. In that district between 6,000 and 7,000 Mexican troops are massed.

Against them, from El Paso and through Juarez, the army may send 4,000 or 5,000 men. This, providing that the militiamen arrive to take up the supply guard and border patrol.

General Pershing, from his main position at Namiquipa, may send over 3,000 more men for the big engagement.

Already General Pershing has sent a supporting column after the two Eleventh Cavalry squadrons that went to the relief of the survivors of the Carrizal trap. Still no word has been received from the relief expedition. Chihuahua reports indicate that seven more Americans have been taken there as prisoners making 21 captured in all.

PEEKSKILL WILL HOLD CELEBRATION

The plans for the celebration by Peekskill-on-the-Hudson of its centennial on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July 2, 3, 4, are nearly complete. The observance suggested and fathered by the Peekskill Board of Trade early last year and on their initiative and request taken up by the village authorities has far exceeded its intended and first proposals. Peekskill confidently expects now to have the biggest celebration in its history.

The week will begin on Sunday with commemorative exercises and special sermons in the village churches, the program to be arranged by each pastor.

In the afternoon it is proposed to have a general interdenominational thanksgiving service in the open air in Dewey Park, with a program of music, vocal and instrumental, and public speakers of renown.

Monday morning will be devoted to the social amenities attendant upon the presence of naval ships in the harbor. The village president, municipal officials and committees will pay formal visit to the commander and his staff and then a return visit will be made and a luncheon given.

In the afternoon the parade will take place. It will be the largest, pagant ever seen in Peekskill. The line of march will be about three miles long, through and about the center of the village. The reviewing officers will be at the Eagle Hotel.

The grand marshal, Captain Frederick Allen Smith, and his executive officer, Douglas Macduff, are busy each day with the details. Nothing is left undone to make the affair a huge success. There will be eight divisions. The first will contain U. S. Marines, sailors from ships in harbor, naval militia, detail from National Guard and floats. The second will have the five Peekskill fire companies and visiting firemen and floats. The third will be made up of the St. Joseph's Home juveniles.

Their regiment of boys, with their own band and many boys in uniform; also their band and floats. The fourth division will comprise the various Hebrew societies of Peekskill and adjoining towns. The fifth division will be composed of the Italian-American Society, Guardian Cadets and band, Guardian School, Holy Name Society, Knights of Columbus, and floats. The sixth division consists of the United Hungarian Societies, bicycle corps, automobiles and floats. The seventh division assembles the Fleischmann employes, Royal Arcanum, Men's Social Club and various local societies and fraternities. The eighth division takes care of the sons of veterans, veterans, public school children, Buchanan Sick Benefit Society, local organizations and floats.

There are to be athletic events also during one of the days with prizes. There will be prizes for the best decorated automobiles.

Monday night there will be a band concert and a carnival with dancing on the asphalt block pavement on the Park street plaza opened to all. Tuesday, Fourth of July, at 11 a. m. there will be a patriotic meeting, with a history of Peekskill read, also addresses by Hon. William J. Bryan, Hon. Lemuel Paget, of the Naval Committee, House of Representatives, and Rear Admiral Chadwick, United States Navy. This will be held in Dewey Park.

The celebration will be brought to a close by a mammoth and magnificent display of fireworks in the evening of July 4th in Dewey Park. Hon. Chauncey M. Depew will deliver a centennial commemorative address in the Guardian Building, Friday evening, June 30. He was born and reared in Peekskill.

There are many other features and events which are being scheduled from day to day to make the three days replete with pleasure and enjoyment. Peekskill will welcome and have room for everybody in America on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July second, third and fourth, in the year nineteen hundred and sixteen.

Invention of Soda Water.
Soda water is an older beverage than Thackeray was to have believed. After an overdose of punch at Vauxhall Joseph Sedley slakes his morning thirst with beer. "Soda water," says Thackeray, "was not invented yet. Small beer was the only drink with which unhappy gentlemen soothed the fever of their previous night's potations." As a matter of fact, in 1815—the year in which the opening scenes of "Vanity Fair" are laid—soda water had been known for close on fifty years, the exact date of its invention being 1769. The oldest bottle of soda water in the world is one retrieved from the wreck of the Royal George, which foundered off Spithead in 1782. When sold by auction some years ago this bottle realized 27½ guineas.—London Standard.

VIVID DESCRIPTION OF VERDUN BATTLE

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Petrograd, June 24.—Vasil Nemirovitch-Danchenko, a veteran Russian newspaper man, sends the following description of the battle of Verdun to his paper here:

"Commencing from Bar-le-Duc the country is a continuous military camp. The entire country lies only for the war. Military supplies stretch for dozens of versts. Wagons with munitions wend their way without end; there are shells on the platforms, shells on the ground. A French general said to me: 'To every shell of the Boches we must reply with four.'"

"The splendid roads are kept up by battalions formed of diggers. Equipment could not be better even in peace time. An abundance of specialists of every kind is evident everywhere in the French army. Everything is foreseen. Scouting is ideal."

"I am writing you separately about aviation. Here it immeasurably surpasses German aviation. The sky in all directions is intersected by these hunting birds."

"At Bar-le-Duc all habitations are occupied. The population of Verdun has sought refuge here. The commandant said to me: 'My population has increased five times.'"

Verdun is empty. Part of this beautiful old town is in ruins. The yawning corners of the houses look as though they had been gnawed by gigantic jaws. Every day 500 shells fall into the martyr town. In the Cathedral, the magnificent stained-glass windows, the work of the great masters of the middle ages, are smashed. Not a single window remains intact. A priest in military uniform and a helmet, with grief and despair showed us his ruined treasures.

"Verdun is honeycombed with subterranean galleries, and no Boche gun can destroy them. In the galleries electricity burns and incessant work proceeds. Hundreds of workmen are here engaged. The subterranean daily bakeries produce thousands of loaves."

"The entire town rumbles like a thunder cloud, and like a thunder cloud is sending north, south and east innumerable lightnings. Its batteries roar without intermission. The entire heavenly vault is pockmarked with shrapnel explosions."

"Thanks to their incomparable reconnaissance and their special apparatus the construction of which I have not the right to describe, the French know every movement of the Boches. The incessant French artillery fire scatters death and destruction in the German trenches. Yesterday a clever shot brought down five German Abbatroches, which fell in the French lines; this morning there were two more."

"From a height which I must not name we looked at the positions destroyed in the fire of sunset. The observation captive balloons appeared black. The black lids of the German batteries began to open and, as they fired, flames of smoke and yellow clouds from shrapnel covered the sky. The artillery of Verdun accepted the challenge. The explosion day went out in a chaos of thunder and the roar of fire from both sides."

"Near us a shell fell on the dead city, and one of the best ever heard collapsed. Yellow tongues of flame which rose from the shattered stones lit the ancient facades covered with coats of arms."

"We gazed through the town cemetery. No sign of life is observable in the silence of the dead streets. The skeletons like apparitions emerge from the ruins and approach us."

"That night we had proof of the astonishing capacity for resistance of the incomparable army of our Allies. Unexpectedly, from the direction of Malancourt, was heard all the frenzied howl of guns and the ceaseless cracking of rifles. The Germans took the village, insignificant on the whole, with ten regiments. It was defended only by a battalion with orders to hold out as long as possible and then retreat. The battalion fought bravely and surrounded its positions with heaps of German corpses."

"General Pettin's plan consisted in compelling the foe to pay with enormous losses for a position of small importance. Malancourt was taken, but a detachment of Germans was fouled. They came on like waves of the ocean, which broke against the iron walls of the French soldiers and their line of wire entanglements. In places these wire entanglements were covered with mounds of bodies and over these bodies passed fresh waves of the enemy's attack."

Peculiarity of French Flag.
It is not generally known that the three stripes of color that make up the French national flag are not equal in width. When the tricolor was first authorized, 1792, the positions and proportions of the three colors were not stated, and such a variety of flags was seen that two years later the national assembly declared that the national standard should be formed of "the three national colors in equal bands placed vertically, the hoist being blue, the middle white and the fly red."

For years the flag was made in this way; but, though the bands were equal, they never looked equal owing to an optical illusion, the blue appearing wider than the white and the white wider than the red.

At last, after many experiments, it was officially decided that in every hundred parts the blue should be thirty-five, white thirty-three and red thirty-seven.—Pittsburgh Press.

IS MOTOR WHEEL A MOTORCYCLE?

Charles McMillan, 12 Years Old, Charged with Riding Motor Wheel Without License—When Is a Motorcycle Not a Motorcycle?

The arrest of Charles McMillan, 12 years old, on Friday afternoon by Policeman Daun, on a charge of riding a bicycle with a motor attachment, without first securing a motorcycle license from the state, has raised a novel question as to whether a bicycle with such an attachment comes under the provisions of the motorcycle law, or not. The charge is also made that the boy is under sixteen years of age.

Chris J. Flanagan represented the boy when he was arraigned before Recorder Lang late that afternoon. The case was adjourned until a week from today to give the attorney general an opportunity to have a representative present in court.

As far as known this is the first case of its kind to arise since the motorcycle law went into effect. Under the new law any one riding a motorcycle must first secure a license from the state. The point in this case is whether the attaching of a motor to a bicycle transforms the bicycle into a motorcycle or not. The determination of this point is of utmost interest to all owners of these small motor attachments.

ELLENVILLE.

Ellenville, June 24.—The old school bell from the brick school house recently purchased by U. E. Terwilliger has been sold to its makers, the Menely Bell Foundry, at Watervliet for $35 and it will no doubt go to some other town and continue in use as it has done in Ellenville since 1863, when it was purchased for the district by the late Jackson R. Carr. The bell was cast in 1853 and was sixteen inches wide and twenty and one-half inches high. For many years it hung in the belfry of the brick school and has called many of the older citizens as well as the younger ones of Ellenville to school, and much sentiment is attached and some have thought it should have been preserved by the interested ones for old times sake of memories and associations.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Van Aken were at Flushing, L. I., on Thursday for the wedding of Mr. Van Aken's sister, Miss Anna G. Van Aken, formerly of Ellenville. Miss Van Aken was united in marriage to Albert Simmons, a prominent business man of Brattleboro, Vt. The ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor in the Reformed Church at Flushing in the presence of relatives and friends. Miss Van Aken for several years has held an important position in the schools on Long Island as supervisor of special studies. She is a graduate of the Ellenville high school and the New Paltz Normal, and has many friends in the county who extend to Mr. and Mrs. Simmons very hearty congratulations. They will occupy a newly erected and furnished home at Brattleboro, Vt.

A dance is announced to be held at the Wayside Inn on Monday evening, July 3. A six piece orchestra from Middletown has been engaged to furnish music for dancing. The committee in charge are Alfred Gaskill, the Hon. W. D. Cunningham, George J. Hoornbeck and C. B. Murray.

Clark D. Bunting, bookkeeper of the Holmes brick block store, with Mrs. Bunting and sister, Miss May Peaker, are spending a ten days' vacation at Asbury Park.

Commencing Sunday, June 25, the Rev. Mr. Vanderlan, graduate of the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, will assume charge as pastor of the Napanoch Reformed Church. Services held every Sunday morning and evening.

The Rev. Walter S. Maines will deliver the baccalaureate sermon to the members of the graduating class at the evening service. Other churches of the village will join in the service at 7:30.

The class of 1916, Ellenville high school, have issued invitations to relatives and friends for the annual commencement exercises the week of June 25, at the high school auditorium.

Mrs. J. R. McLaren, who with her son, Robert Southwick, have occupied an apartment in Mrs. J. M. Clair's residence on Park street the past school year, will return to Grahamsville for the summer and in September will move to New York city, where Mr. McLaren is engaged in business.

Miss Mary Hartwig has been tendered a position in the schools at Woodmere, L. I., with a fine increase in salary which she now receives in the Ellenville schools. Ellenville people will regret the departure of Miss Hartwig from the village schools.

Mrs. U. S. Brundage of Napanoch and Mrs. David Brundage of the village have joined their husbands at Pompton Lakes, N. J., where they have positions with the Dupont people.

Miss Laura Eppel, daughter of Mrs. Alice White Eppel, graduated from one of the Chicago high schools the past week. Many Ellenville friends recall Mrs. Eppel as one of Ellenville's high school graduates a few years ago when her father, the Rev. S. F. White, was pastor of the M. E. Church.

The next meeting of the New York State Branch Woman Suffrage party will be held with Mrs. Henry Horton at Maplewood Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock to adopt a constitution and outline work of the society.

Mrs. Walter M. Brown has been spending several days with her daughter, Mrs. E. D. Montrose, and family at Ulster Heights.

Thomas Thornton and Miss Norma DeVany, students at Cornell, are home for the summer vacation.

The Rev. Donald Boyce has returned from attending the general synod of the Reformed Church, which granted a dispensation for his ordination which will be carried out at his church at Westerlo at an early date. Mrs. Boyce spent the time of her husband's absence with his parents. Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Boyce, in Ellenville.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Boquiol of Brooklyn have come to their home in Ellenville for the summer.

Mrs. Lathrop and children have joined Mr. Lathrop at Lake Minnawaska for the summer.

Mrs. Nelson N. Moneyenny and daughter, Miss Mollie Moneyenny, with twenty young lady classmates of Miss Moneyenny of class 1914 of Brooklyn, spent the past week at Mohawk Lake.

Miss Cassidy of Petaluma, Cal., is the guest of her cousin, Wilson R. Denman, and family on Main street.

Mrs. Thirza Catherwood Miller has gone to Rochester to attend the marriage of her niece.

The Ellenville Ladies Talmud Torah Society have purchased the Anna K. Eckert property on Center street and will have it remodeled for a Hebrew school.

George M. Beebe is adding improvements to his home on Maple avenue.

Charles Eck is erecting a residence on the Rauner property on North Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Parker of Paterson, New Jersey, are week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Clark.

Mrs. J. L. Evans is spending two weeks with her daughter, Miss Carrie Evans, in Middletown.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

I am overhauling a very noisy four cylinder motor with overhead valves and would like to know if reducing the valve lift to three-sixteenths or one-fourth of an inch would make any difference in the noise, the present lift being one-half inch. The cams are also very sharp, which I imagine would cause a great deal of noise, but possibly may be remedied by grinding of the points to make them more rounded. Also, would this affect the power of the motor, and in what way?

You might decrease the noise by doing this, but you would also cut down the power because the valves would be opened less. This would cut down the charge admitted and lessen the possibilities of properly ridding the cylinders of burned gases.

If the speedometer on my car would register accurately with 35 by 4 1/2 tires, how far would it throw my speedometer off if 36 by 5 tires were put on? How many miles in every ten or in one hundred?

If your speedometer registered correctly with thirty-five inch tires and you add one inch to the diameter by fitting thirty-six inch tires you add 3.14 inches to the circumference of the tire. Of course the speedometer is set to register one mile every 5,280 feet, or every time the wheel turns around approximately 707 times, although every time the wheel turns when equipped with a tire one inch greater in diameter than that for which the speedometer is designed the travel is 3.1 inches per turn, or 150.73 feet in 576 turns greater than registered. Thus it will be seen that when your speedometer registers a hundred miles you really will have traveled 102.85 miles, or 2.85 miles more than your indicator registers.

My car carbonizes quickly and smokes a great deal. Do you think a leak proof ring at the top of each piston will do any good?

Very likely this would help, but even better results should be obtained by using a full set of rings.

Would there be any difference in the amount of gasoline consumed in a car going forty miles at the rate of forty miles per hour and the same car on the same trip going ten miles per hour?

There would be a difference in the gasoline consumed going at these two different rates of speed, and the probabilities are that there would be less consumed for traveling the distance at ten miles per hour than there would at forty miles per hour. The reason for this is in the wind resistance. In traveling at ten miles per hour the wind resistance for each square foot of projected area against a vertical transverse plane would be 0.492 pound. At forty miles per hour this resistance has increased to 7.873 pounds. Therefore, if the projected area is twenty-five square feet this pressure amounts to a considerable quantity at a rate of forty miles per hour. The power required to overcome wind resistance can be figured approximately by a formula which is given as follows:

$H. P. = 0.06 P A M$

In this formula H. P. is the horsepower required to overcome the wind resistance, P the wind pressure in pounds per square foot over area A, and M is the speed of the car in m. p. h. Thus, assuming a car with a front area of ten square feet and speed of sixty miles per hour, the power required to overcome the resistance alone be 20.8.

What is the maximum speed of two cycle engines?

The maximum speed of the two cycle may be expected to be lower than that of the four cycle, due to the fact that with the increase in speed more of the dead gas will remain in the cylinder.

I have a car which I wish to convert into a speedster. Can you tell me what changes are necessary to secure the most speed out of it?

The weight distribution over the front and rear wheels should be made as nearly equal as possible, so that the car will hold the track and take the turns without upsetting. This rule is followed out in designing cars for racing. The center of gravity is made as low as possible to accomplish the same end. The motor should be balanced by making the reciprocating parts as nearly equal as possible in weight. The crankshaft must be perfectly balanced, the connecting rods to weigh the same—in fact, there must not be more work thrust upon one cylinder than upon another. By reducing the body weight the car will give greater speed. The new body should be such that wind resistance is reduced considerably, for this is one great factor in speed. By reducing the gear ratio still greater speed may be obtained, but the life of the car would be short with a gear ratio of less than three and one-half to one.

Is there such a thing as an internal combustion rotary engine?

There has been a great deal of experimenting in the way of internal combustion rotary engines and gasoline turbines. In fact, there are dozens of them on file in the patent office. So far none of them has been a financial success.

Will you kindly describe a universal joint and its action?

A universal joint is a mechanism that is designed to have free angular movement with positive rotary movement. Its function is to allow two shafts at varying angles to each other to have a positive driving connection.

Can you tell me the difference, if any, between a torsion, torque, strut and radius rod?

Torsion rods, torque rods, torsion tubes and torque arms are all the same in office. This office is to prevent a live driving axle from twisting axially in response to its own and the vehicle's inertia instead of transmitting the torque of the drive. In other words, all of these devices are to resist the torque reaction. The torque is the twisting effort of the driving means, whose object is to turn the wheels. There are two general forms of torque members, the torsion tube and the torque arm. The torsion tube is a tubular inclosure for the driving shaft, which is usually yoked or otherwise pivoted to the frame at its front. The reaction of the axle in driving causes it to press on the underside of the frame. The reaction in braking is in the reverse direction and causes it to pull downward on the frame. A torque arm has a similar mission, but it is in the form of an arm, either to one side or directly under the driving shaft. The radius rod or strut rod is a member designed to keep the axle in place against its tendency to move forward under driving stress or to move backward when the brakes are applied. The terms are synonymous.

Would it be better for starting my motor to shorten the intake manifold and use a cowl gasoline tank? Would it improve the pulling to any extent?

Probably beneficial results as far as motor operation is concerned would come from raising the carburetor and shortening the intake, as you would give last chance for condensation of the fuel, but it is doubtful if the results obtained would warrant the expense and trouble.

The gasoline tank on my six cylinder car is on the rear end of the car, and the gasoline is forced up to an auxiliary tank on the dash. It then flows down to the carburetor. I also have a four cylinder car, and the gasoline tank is under the front seat, and the gasoline flows from there to the carburetor. When running very slowly for twenty minutes in hot weather the gasoline will stop flowing to the carburetor, and the car stops. If I wait five minutes the gasoline will begin to flow again and everything will work properly. Both cars work exactly alike in this respect. Can you give me some advice on this?

The fact that two cars act the same renders this a very mysterious state of affairs, but there are two explanations which may fit the case. The first explanation is that there are air locks in the piping. It very often happens that in installing the gasoline line large vertical bends are allowed to occur in the piping. When this happens there are certain times when the gasoline will be drawn away and what corresponds to a large bubble will form in the bend. The result is that the gasoline is choked and cannot flow until this bubble is broken, which occurs due to the weight of the gasoline after a few moments' wait. When the gasoline is again drawn through the piping another bubble is apt to form and the same occurrence happens again.

The second explanation for your trouble is that instead of the gasoline ceasing to flow the condition of running on a rich mixture for twenty minutes results in flooded engine, which will not again operate until sufficient gasoline has evaporated to bring the mixture down to the range of explosiveness. Above and below this range a mixture of air and gasoline will not explode. With the ordinary carburetor the auxiliary air valve will remain closed at very low speeds, with the result that practically all of the suction of the motor falls upon the jet and nothing but raw gasoline is drawn into the manifold. After running a short time in this condition, with more gasoline being drawn into the manifold than is being used, the motor is choked and stops. When you wait for five minutes, as you say, the accumulated gasoline evaporates, with the result that an explosive mixture is again formed and the car will run properly until the same condition is again set up.

The remedy for the trouble is either to make a lighter adjustment on the air valve or to install some device admitting extra air to the manifold. A number of these are on the market and can be attached by simply tapping into the intake manifold and by installing a control system to the steering column or a convenient position in the car. Whenever the mixture becomes super-rich, so that it is necessary to dilute it with an extra supply of air, this can be done from the driver's seat. Such an installation not only guards against the trouble which you mentioned, but also permits a reduction in your gasoline bills by making a leaner mixture for higher speeds at which the car is practically continuously run during a tour through the country.

GET AFTER POP FLIES

Manager Jones Wants His Men to Catch Texas Leaguers.

Shows Outfielder Marsans How Trick Can Be Done and Cuban Star Grows Wise—Fly Chasers Must Be Ready to Rush In.

There will be no loafing on the part of Browne outfielders on pop flies or Texas leaguers in back of the infield, as long as Fielder Jones is directing the plays of the Sportsman's park team. The fly chasers should and must be ready at all times to rush in to get short pops that frequently elude a pursuing infielder who is running with his back to the diamond in an effort to make the catch. Jones has instructed his men to this effect.

During practice session the other day a pop fly was hit into the air by one of the rookies, which dropped just behind the infield. Lavan tried desperately to make the catch, but could not judge the ball, and missed it by a few inches. Marsans, who was playing center, started in at the crack of the bat, but suddenly stopped when he discovered Lavan dashing wildly out into the field to make the catch.

When the side had been retired and Marsans was heading toward the bench, Jones motioned Armando to his side and queried why he had stopped on the pop fly.

"Why, I thought Lavan would make the catch," answered Marsans.

"You outfielders will have to take more chances on short flies than you do," returned Jones.

"You would have made an easy catch of that ball if you continued to come in," said the Browns' manager.

"Fewer Texas leaguers will drop behind the infield if you fellows take more chances and attempt to make a catch," continued Fielder.

"Well, if I continued running I might have collided with Lavan and either or both of us might have been injured," answered Marsans.

"Nothing of the sort," said Jones. "We have a field captain who is appointed for no other purpose than calling to the men on such plays.

"It is much easier for an outfielder to come in at breakneck speed on a pop fly than for an infielder to be dashing wildly with his back to the diamond trying to make a catch," continued Jones.

Shortstop Lavan.

About this time Marsans had been convinced that he had used poor judgment, and continued on to the bench.

In the next inning or two that followed a similar fly was sent up into the air. Lavan again started backward and Marsans was dashing in to make the catch, and Lavan stopped. Marsans made the catch easily.

This proved that Jones' baseball knowledge was correct.

FREEMAN ONE-CENT-A-WORD "WANT" ADLETS

ITS OF SHRAPNEL FROM COMPANY M

Company M is now an infantry company of the U. S. A., but the boys about the same, thank you. Yet it is plain that watchful waiting is a popular proposition at the moment.

The recruits are making good soldiers. Not only are they a lot of young men of good calibre but they are themselves ready to discipline themselves of their interest in the new war. Hence, the splendid work done by Lieutenants Dittus and Cashin and the non-commissioned officers showed up quickly in the first debuts of the rookies in uniform.

While not generally known, it is a fact that the military power vested in the militia officers is considerable. It might be well to state that any of the men who are given the honor of the uniform may be dealt with severely. The offenders could be placed under arrest if the commanding officer so desired. To the credit of Kingston let it be said that of this nature has thus far been abated except one woman who it is hoped was only joking. Yelled to the men as the company passed on the street Thursday night, "You little devil, I hope you get out of this uniform as quick as you can." This cordial greeting is said to have come from a relative of one of the privates who became incensed because the young man enlisted.

A game of Grab with part of various kits as prizes was played on the morning floor Friday afternoon when a men were lined up and every article of equipment accounted for. It was done to straighten out several packs which had been mixed up in the memorable battle of Alsens. Everybody got the blanket and other equipment to which he was entitled after a half hour's hard work sorting. Each article of a soldier's kit is numbered and assigned to him and which is also stamped on his blanket and rifle.

A good story of the mobilization comes from Hudson, where a banker came so obsessed with the thought of getting into action that he paid attention to details. At the time, it is Captain Cranston who tells the story, the man was dressed in evening dress to go out to dinner when the call came. In his absorption he started to the lavatory and when he started to leave, pushed the door. "He meant all right," said a captain, "but he pushed the door of the shower bath!"

An old man of sixty demanded to be admitted to the Company today, stating that his name had been published in the papers and, hence, he was entitled to go to the front. The officers had hard work convincing him that he could not get in.

The members of Company M are in the baseball game this afternoon at the Athletic Field, where agston and Tivoli are trying to win on the diamond. The ardsman are guests of the management.

Many organizations in the city are asked the privilege of making kits to soldiers and many little remembrances have found their way to the front. Most of these take the form of religious articles which are given from secular to testaments.

MISS GRETHE FUERTTH. (Int. Film Service.)
SIVOR OF TUBANTIA BRAVE ANOTHER WAR CRISIS TO WED.

New York, June 23.—Miss Grethe Fuertth, a pretty young girl who is from Hamburg, Germany, was ready to brave the perils of a voyage to Mexico to journey to Antofagasta, Chile, where she will wed sweetheart of ten years ago, Maximo Pils. Miss Fuertth, who decided to leave Hamburg to marry the man of choice, whom she had not seen in ten years, braved the perils of marine warfare and took passage aboard the ill-fated Dutch steamer, Antia, which was torpedoed off the Holland coast. Fortunately she was rescued and placed aboard a trawler. Later she sailed from way and reached New York to re-embark one of the steamers going to Chile. "I do hope no Mexican torpedo will interrupt my journey to Chile," German one did my first attempt to reach New York," she said.

Corpus Christi Celebration.

The Corpus Christi feast, transferred from Thursday to Sunday in the Catholic Church of the United States, that all the faithful may take part in it, will be solemnly celebrated this Sunday in the Immaculate Conception Church. The High Mass with exposition of Blessed Sacrament will begin at 10 a. m. After mass the solemn procession will proceed to the three altars, prepared at the church grounds. All the church societies in their respective uniforms will be in procession. At each altar there will be singing of the beginning of the Gospel of the four evangelists, and benediction with the Blessed Sacrament will be at each altar. The procession will terminate at church, where from the high altar for the fourth time benediction will be given. This will be a most impressive feast as all the parishioners will take part in it to outwardly express their faith and love towards our saviour ever present in the Blessed Sacrament.

Could Not Go to Catskill.

At the eleventh hour it was found absolutely impossible for the Kingston Symphony Society to give the advertised concert in Catskill last evening. Harry Relyea, the clarinet soloist of the orchestra, was taken suddenly and seriously ill with what it was feared was ptomaine poisoning. As each of the symphonic movements to be played in the evening—four in all—calls for a clarinet solo of greater or less length, it was an impossibility to give the concert without a solo performer on this instrument, accustomed to symphonic work, and New York was telegraphed in the hope of making the concert. Intensely to the regret of the society, it was too late to secure such a man from New York and it was found necessary to postpone the concert until next week. The date will be announced in Monday evening's Freeman.

SUMMER PORCHES

The Luxury of Living Outdoors in Hot Weather.

WHAT PAINT WILL DO.

Get Out Your Old Chairs, Buy Two New Wickers, Give Them a Green Coat and Then Dress Them Up in Gay Chintzes.

It seems a pity that all country homes are not built with roomy, spacious piazzas. After all, the principal reason that any one has for living in the suburbs and going through all the trouble of commuting is because he wants to live in the country. Of course six months in the year it is too cold to sit out of doors, but when spring comes the suburbanite wants to enjoy the country to the utmost. He cannot do this by sitting indoors, certainly. He wants to read his paper and smoke his pipe where he can see nature's beauties spread all out before his eyes—namely, on the porch.

Modern architects are realizing more and more the need for big porches, no matter how small the house. Of course the suburbanite who owns his own home can always add to the porches if he wishes. But the others must make the most of what they have and do the best they can to make their piazza cozy and comfortable, no matter how small it may be.

You women who live in the country will find that a can or two of paint and a bolt of pretty chintz will do much to transform your porch furniture. If you have no comfortable chairs for piazza use do buy one or two. They need not be expensive pieces, but be sure they are comfortable and have pretty lines. The wicker or reed furniture is really the most attractive for verandas, and it is not at all expensive.

You need not worry if you have two or three pieces of one kind and a couple of pieces of another variety. After you have given them all a coat of the same paint and made chintz cushioned seats and backs for them they will look enough alike to fool any casual eye. Besides, no one expects rigid formality in porch decorations.

If your house is white or gray you will find that green porch furniture will look best. Give all the chairs, tables and settees a coat of green paint and one of green enamel paint. The chintz for green furniture should contrast with it, and a figure with a good deal of red in it will be found most effective.

It may be wisest to have a cheap upholsterer make the seat cushions and backs if you are afraid to tackle so tricky a job. Have them made with some white goods as a cover. Then you can yourself make slip covers of the chintz for them. The reason why it is better not to have the chintz put right on as the first cover of the cushions is because it may soil very quickly, being where the street dust can easily reach it. If the chintz is made into slip covers they can be removed and washed when soiled.

If your house is any other color except white or gray brown porch furniture is prettiest. So you can paint your furnishings brown and use almost any gayly colored, pretty bright chintz for cushions.

TRIALS OF AN ORCHESTRA.

Its Labors Marked an Epoch in Our Musical History.

Back in the eighteen forties a number of traveling orchestras came to America from Europe.

The most famous was the Germania, which gave its first concert in New York Oct. 5, 1848. The seed fell on stony ground at first. In Philadelphia Arch Street hall was rented for $10, Jan. 1, 1849—the receipts were exactly $9.50. In the middle of the performance the manager of the hall appeared and threatened to turn out the lights if the rental was not paid immediately. To a man the orchestra voted that the lights be turned out, and the concert ceased.

Later this organization was more successful. During the next six weeks it gave 829 concerts in the east, west and south, besides collaborating in oratorios and with local choral societies. Jenny Lind sang with them at times, and they were joined by Henrietta Sonntag, Tedesco, August Kreissmann, Ole Bull and others now and then.

They disbanded in 1854, but wherever one of their number settled a contagion point was established from which a love and appreciation of music radiated throughout the community. This seed scattering was of incalculable value to the spread of musical taste in America. It marked an epoch in our musical history.—New York American.

OUR FIRST PRESIDENT.

Only Ten of the Thirteen States Took Part in His Election.

New York state had no part in the election of the first president of the United States. For some years following the establishment of the federal government the legislatures of most of the states chose the presidential electors, the people voting for them only indirectly, their choice being expressed by their votes for legislators. A deadlock between the senate and the assembly prevented the selection of electors from New York state. Rhode Island and North Carolina had not yet ratified the constitution, so Washington was elected the first time by the votes of only ten of the thirteen states.

New York city was the scene of the first inauguration, however. Washington took the oath on the portico of Federal hall, on the present site of the subtreasury, at Wall and Nassau streets, April 30, 1789. Immediately following this ceremony he retired within the building and delivered an address to congress, which met in Federal hall in those days. John Adams, the second president, also addressed congress in person, but Jefferson broke the custom which President Wilson has revived. Jefferson stigmatized that form of address as monarchical and put his message in writing.—New York Sun.

Origin of Dukes.

The word "duke" is from the Latin "dux," a leader. In early Saxon times the commanders of armies were called dukes—i. e., the leaders of the soldiery. In other words, the first duke was the first best fighting man. No regard was had to ancestry or present attainments or any other sort of thing beyond the simple matter of warlike efficiency. Naturally the leader of the fighting would, when the fighting was over, come in for the lion's share of the spoils and "honors," and naturally again the rest of the folks would "look up" to him, and by degrees his superiority would be imparted to his family, and a "nobility" would spring into being. It all rested, to start with, on brute force and animal courage combined with cunning in clubbing and thrusting.

First picture taken since the announcement of their engagement shows Mrs. John Jacob Astor, widow of the well known New York society man who died on the Titanic, and William K. The happy couple were united in marriage on June 22, and are now on their honeymoon.

On Firing Line.

"Have you ever been on the firing line?"
"Sure! Only last week my boss stood us all in line, and I was the first one he fired."
"And were you ever rewarded for bravery?"
"Oh, yes."
"Did you get the iron cross?"
"Nope."
"The Victoria cross?"
"Naw. I got the maltese cross."
"How could you get the maltese cross?"
"I stepped on her tail."—Exchange.

Not His Nerves.

"Doctor," said the sick man, "I'm afraid my nerves are in bad condition."
"Oh, no," replied the physician; "that's not what is the matter with you. The fact that you have sent for me after ignoring the statements I've been sending you regularly during the past year and a half indicates that your nerve's all right."—Chicago Herald.

Odd Way to Rest.

There is nothing, says a medical journal, that will rest you so quickly as to sit on a straight back chair and, lifting the feet from the floor, push them out in front of you as far as possible, stretch the arms, put the head back, open the mouth wide and make yourself yawn.

When time does come to the average man it rests on his tombstone.—Pittsburgh Telegraph.

NEW YORK SOCIETY GIRLS DOING RED CROSS WORK FOR OUR SOLDIERS.

Miss Mimi Scott and Miss Dorothy Lee Mills, Sewing for Soldiers. New York, June 24.—Women's work for the soldiers who may go into Mexico has already begun here. Many of the girls of the social set have begun sewing, making bandages and doing other such work at the headquarters of the American Red Cross. Among the girls who are devoting their time to working for the soldiers are Miss Mimi Scott and Miss Dorothy Lee Mills, both leaders in the younger set.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Kingston, N. Y., May 1, 1916, under post office number 1000. Published by Freeman Publishing Company, at 20 Broadway, Kingston, N. Y. J. E. KINGSTON, N. Y., JUNE 24, 1916.

Economic conditions affect patriotism to an unmistakable degree and the unwillingness of the family man to perform service for his country in the militia or in the field is most understandable when one stops to reflect what the pay envelope means to those dependent upon his earning capacity. And, too, a soldier cannot take any special pride in assistance given by outsiders, whether relief organizations whose objects are more patriotic than charitable, or charity institutions themselves. Some of the larger corporations, together with smaller business houses that can ill afford it, have arranged to continue the wages of employes in whole or in part during the time the latter are in the government service. This is a commendable proposition although in some of the larger concerns such burden is a negligible percentage of their pay rolls while in smaller establishments the proportion may be very much higher and the burden consequently far heavier. The problem appears to be best handled by the federal government in the resolution passed by the house providing $1,000,000 for the relief of those dependent upon soldiers, the provision including brothers and sisters under 14 years as well as wives or parents. This seems the most satisfactory form of adjusting the economic scale so seriously tilted by a wage earner's enlistment. The senate should take similar action and provide for further installments of the appropriation as a million is hardly a starter where very many thousands of men are concerned even though only a small proportion may actually need such co-operation.

Two near-homicides can be credited to sentiment at Sing Sing this week when Oreste Shillitani, awaiting execution in the death house, nearly murdered two guards in a desperate though unsuccessful endeavor to escape. Federal methods in prison procedure were entirely responsible for the affair. Some time ago under the Osborne-Kirchwey system of reform by wrist-slapping the guards were compelled to give up their firearms. Following this action, four months ago it was decided that the sight of a night stick was too brutalizing for the prisoners, and, hence, the guards were left with their two fists and whatever knowledge of the pugilistic art they may have acquired to enforce prison rules. That was the situation when Shillitani, armed with a revolver smuggled in by a visitor, made a break for liberty and shot down the two guards who faced the maddened convict in a death house corridor. That the men stopped Shillitani is more of a credit to their courage than to state prison discipline. The spectacle of guards not even armed with nick sticks is a sample of pacificism, one nutty. It is high time that a change was tried in Sing Sing methods. "Kind words butter no parsnips" and kind words capture no criminals either in our humble estimation.

"PORK."

If Congress should appropriate $50,000 to $75,000 for a post office building at Pine Hill; $75,000 each for similar buildings at Rifton and Marlborough, and $100,000 for buildings at New Paltz and Rosendale there would be strong criticism which would be justly deserved. At the same ratio of population to appropriation, Ellenville would receive in excess of $200,000 and Saugerties would receive about $300,000. The villages mentioned are the incorporated villages of Ulster county. In all of them the space used for post office purposes is rented; there is no need of a public building and any demand for such a building in any of the villages would meet with derision and a careful scrutiny for the "nigger in the woodpile." In view of the conditions in Ulster county, it is surprising to study the appropriations for post office buildings in small villages in the South and West which are in the general Public Buildings Bill. The New York Times, which is supporting President Wilson, publishes editorially without comment a list of sixteen appropriation bills for post office buildings, with the population of the places which are to be so favored, the post office receipts from the present offices, and the amount of the appropriation, as follows:

Place	Pop.	Re.	App.
McKen, Ky.	145	$20	$25,000
Quincy, Wyo.	251	$200	$25,000

Grand Canyon, Ariz.	290	$312	$25,000
Salisbury, Ky.	310	1,151	75,000
Louis, Va.	318	6,094	75,000
Wesley, N. C.	320	1,200	75,000
Webster Springs, W. Va.	500	2,342	150,000
Manassas, Col.	567	1,040	50,000
Susanville, Cal.	628	7,658	60,000
Reading, N. D.	717	2,907	75,000
Greenville, Ga.	809	2,845	90,000
Clayton, N. M.	970	7,445	125,000
Brookville, Pa.	970	5,586	100,000
Eller, Idaho	1,221	6,922	100,000
Seaca, N. C.	1,312	5,250	100,000
Pawnee, Okla.	2,161	5,714	200,000

For purposes of comparison, the population of the incorporated villages in Ulster county according to the last Federal census is herewith given, as follows:

Pine Hill	417
Rifton	745
Marlborough	930
Rosendale	1,125
New Paltz	1,230
Eller	1,231
Saugerties	3,329

Looking over the list published in The Times, it should be apparent to everyone that a Congressional investigation of these appropriations is needed immediately. The appropriations are inconsistent for one thing. Why should McKee, Ky., with 145 population, have $75,000 when Grand Canyon, Ariz., with a population of 299—more than double McKee—receive only $25,000, unless it be that more tourists visit Grand Canyon and the scandal of a $75,000 appropriation there would become spread wider and quicker? Why should Susanville, Cal., with annual receipts of $7,958 receive a paltry $50,000 when Webster Springs, West Virginia, with receipts of $2,362 gets $150,000, unless the West Virginia village was named after Daniel Webster and the Democratic party is trying to reward patriotism?

With Congressional pork barrel appropriations mounting up to the neighborhood of forty million dollars, is it not time for a change in the administrative government of the United States

The Come-Back.

A lad went into a baker's shop in Dublin to buy a two-penny loaf. Having received it, he struck him that it was underweight, so he drew the baker's attention to it. "Never mind that," said the baker, "it will be less for you to carry." "Very well," replied the boy, and throwing a halfpence on the counter he walked away. The shopman called after him and told him he had not left enough money. "Oh, never mind that," retorted the smart Irish lad. "It will be less for you to count."—Philadelphia Star.

"In short, the people treat pacificism as the pretty girl treated the shipping clerk."

"No, I can't marry you," she said to the shipping clerk, after he had proposed. "You see, you are too extravagant."

"Me extravagant?" shouted the shipping clerk. "Me? Why, on the contrary, dearest one, I'm very economical. I have to be."

"Then more than ever I feel," she said, "that I cannot be your wife."

"You can't be my wife because I'm economical," he gasped, bewildered by her shifts and changes.

Oak and Mushroom.

Maj. General Arthur Murray said at a dinner in San Francisco: "Some people reproach England because the German army has proved to be a better one than hers. But the German army had been preparing for this war for 40 years, and the English army had only about 10 minutes to prepare for it. 'The English navy is all right. It is superior, far superior, to the German navy. There, you see, the long and thorough preparation was on England's side. 'Long and thorough preparation. Short and shallow preparation—efficiency is all a question of that.' General Murray shrugged. "When God," he said, "wants to make a magnificent oak, he takes a hundred years, but he only takes an hour or so to make a mushroom."—Los Angeles Times.

PORT EWEN.

Port Ewen, June 24.—Monday evening, June 26, the graduating class of Public School, No. 13, will hold their last meeting at Pythian Hall at 8:30 p. m. Some important business is to be acted upon and tickets for reserved seats will be distributed at that time to the members of the class. Alfalfa Flour.
Alfalfa flour is now mixed with wheat flour and made into bread. It costs less and has greater food value than ordinary wheat flour. Most people don't like it, but perhaps we can get it to just as we force our stock to eat sweet clover.

The "New Idea" Cabinet
"Your own idea of what a kitchen cabinet ought to be"

Revolving Flour Bin

Roller Curtains in Base

This, the Sellers Kitcheneed "New Idea," is the latest, most perfect achievement of the organization making "your own idea of what a kitchen cabinet ought to be." It has been over twenty-five years developing. It possesses more patented, practically useful convenience features than ever any kitchen cabinet made. The "New Idea" Flour Bin is the most sanitary, practical and simply constructed bin ever put on a Sellers Kitcheneed. A simple problem in physics producing a perfect balance enables a woman to fill the bin with fifty pounds of flour in the position you see it here, and return to its original position without effort. It is easily removed for thorough cleaning, and on account of its construction, cannot cake with flour. The Sellers Kitcheneed Roll Curtain Lifter in the base—by simply bringing the handle across the front of the base the roll curtain is lifted, permitting the easiest access to the base compartment. It is not necessary to stoop and lift the curtain from the bottom. There are other convenience details, many of them, that are a part of the Sellers Kitcheneed "New Idea." These mentioned are significant of the value of the rest. To conserve a woman's strength and, incidentally, and importantly, her youth, has been, among the chief motives for the designing of this new Sellers Kitcheneed.

No Cause for Complaint.

"My good man," said the philosopher to the laborer who was amputating weeds from a piece of vacant real estate, "do you ever have occasion to complain of your lot?" "No, sir," answered the honest son of toil. "I don't own this lot."

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke).

New York, June 24.—Old timers like to tell the story of the last battle between Kid McCoy and Peter Maher—the exhibition bout during which McCoy knocked out the Irishman with one punch.

Eight or ten years ago a benefit card was arranged. The promoters figured that it would add to the gaiety of the occasion if they could get on McCoy and Maher. Both practically had retired from active ring work, and so the folks behind the affair used a bit of subterfuge in making the match.

An emissary went to McCoy. "Say, Kid," he said, "I understand Peter Maher's been saying that the knockout you scored over him in Coney Island in 1900 was a fluke. Says if he ever got another chance at you he'd knock you flatter in a pan-cake."

"Pete says that, hey?" bellowed McCoy. "Why, the old stiff! Say, if I ever got another crack at him he wouldn't last five minutes." "Oh, by the way, Kid," said the tempter, as an afterthought, "there's going to be a benefit entertainment in a week or two. Would you mind going on for a few rounds?"

Ruse Successful.

"Not at all," said the Kid. "And, say, if you can do it, get Maher for me—oh, please, do get Maher."

And then the emissary went to Peter and nonchalantly remarked that "McCoy is going to donate his services. We're trying to find some one to box him. Can you suggest anyone?"

"Can I?" blurted out Peter. "Can I? Well I sure can. And his name is Peter Maher. You'll let me box him, d'ye hear?"

And so the bout was made. When the rivals entered the ring that night it was apparent to everyone that both were not in real fighting shape. Also it was noticeable that both men, instead of exhibiting the friendliness that usually exists between boxers in a benefit performance, were glaring at each other savagely.

"No Rough Stuff!"—Referee. The referee brought them together and told them that one affair was to be a boxing exhibition only.

"Nothing else, mind you," cautioned the referee. "Just box and take it easy. No rough stuff."

"Of hear ye," said Peter. "I gotcha," responded McCoy.

The ring landed and the fighters walked to the center of the ring, and began circling around.

"Now," said you, Peter, no slugging," murmured Kid. "We're just boxing, see?"

"That's right; McCoy, and don't yez try anything funny with me," retorted Peter.

The fiddling continued. The pair circled the ring, but neither offered to swing. The round was about half over, without a lead being made, when McCoy, fox that he always was, half turned toward the audience. He seemed unconscious of the fact that he was supposed to be fighting.

Maher watched him narrowly a moment, figuring it was a trick. But the Kid continued oblivious to his ring foe.

"The Punch Slipped"—McCoy. Peter advanced closer and closer. This was an opening that was too good to miss. Peter, you'll remember hadn't forgotten the stigma of that Coney Island defeat. Nor was he forgetting about what McCoy is supposed to have said about him. Revenge is quite sweet.

Peter drew back the mighty right that had sent so many men into dreamland; drew it back cautiously and so as to get the full power into it when it swung. His arm shot for the Kid's head with the whale right of the Maher body behind it—but the blow never landed.

Like a streak of lightning, the Kid wheeled around. This was the change he had craved. His whirl got him out of range of the Maher "Haymaker." As the wallop whizzed past him, and Maher, off balance, was in range, McCoy lashed out a right that caught Peter flush on the jaw. The crash was heard in all parts of the house.

A fraction of a second after the blow landed, and while Maher, although tottering, was still on his feet, McCoy turned to the audience, a quizzical smile on his face, and shouted:

"Th, lookit, ladies and gentlemen, lookit Peter. He's dead. And I'm so sorry. But the punch slipped."

When Peter finally was revived, he felt his aching head and muttered: "And the devil said no rough stuff."

The confident Robins received a shock when the Giants invaded Flatbush and tore their feathers off.

The Yankees are nibbling at the top rung of the ladder again. The double defeat administered to the Nationals has put them a game and a half from the lead.

Boston tried hard to check the Phillies. But with "King" Alexander hurling it was futile. At that Moran and his men had to go eleven innings to get the victory.

It isn't often two hits win games but that was all the Red Sox and Cubs needed to polish off the Athletics and Reds.

GEORGE FOSTER

FOSTER, CONVALESCENT, SHOWS FLASH OF BEST FORM OF SEASON.

Tonsillitis is evidently good for George Foster, the twirler for the Boston Red Sox. George had not shown much form this season and was out of the game with a bad attack of the throat trouble and was just convalescing when he stepped onto the mound and pitched a no-hit game against the New York Yankees the other day.

Foster pitched masterful ball and the only blow in the game that threatened to become a base hit was made by J. Franklin Baker, who drove a long fly to right field, where Harry Hooper made a nice catch of it.

PURPLE MARTIN (Progne subis)

Length, about eight inches.
Range: Breeds throughout the United States and southern Canada, south to central Mexico; winters in South America.

Habits and economic status: This is the largest as it is one of the most beautiful of the swallow tribe. It formerly built its nests in cavities of trees, as it still does in wild districts, but learning that man was a friend it soon adopted domestic habits. Its presence about the farm can often be secured by erecting houses suitable for nesting sites and protecting them from usurpation by the English sparrow, and every effort should be made to increase the number of colonies of this very useful bird. The boxes should be at a reasonable height, say 15 feet from the ground, and made inaccessible to cats. A colony of these birds on a farm makes great inroads upon the insect population, as the birds not only themselves feed upon insects but rear their young upon the same diet. Fifty years ago in New England it was not uncommon to see colonies of 50 pairs of martins, but most of them have now vanished for no apparent reason except that the martin houses have decayed and have not been renewed. More than three-fourths of this bird's food consists of wasps, bugs, and beetles, their importance being in the order given. The beetles include several species of harmful weevils, as the clover-leaf weevils and the nut weevils. Besides these are many crane flies, moths, May flies, and dragon flies.

ELLENVILLE

Ellenville, June 24.—The old school bell from the brick school house recently purchased by U. E. Terwilliger has been sold to its makers, the Menelys Bell Foundry, at Watervliet for $35 and it will no doubt go to some other town and continue in use as it has done in Ellenville since 1863, when it was purchased for the district by the late Jackson R. Carr. The bell was cast in 1853 and was sixteen inches high and twenty and one-half inches wide. For many years it hung in the belfry of the brick school and has called many of the older citizens as well as the younger ones of Ellenville to school, and much sentiment is attached and some have thought it should have been preserved by the interested ones for old times sake of memories and associations.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Van Aken were at Flushing, L. I., on Thursday for the wedding of Mr. Van Aken's sister, Miss Anna G. Van Aken, to Mr. Merly of Ellenville. Miss Van Aken was united in marriage to Albert Simmons, a prominent business man of Brattleboro, Vt. The ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor in the Reformed Church at Flushing in the presence of relatives and friends. Miss Van Aken for several years has held an important position in the schools on Long Island as supervisor of special studies. She is a graduate of the Ellenville high school and the New Paltz Normal, and has many friends in the county who extend to Mr. and Mrs. Simmons very hearty congratulations. They will occupy a newly erected and furnished home at Brattleboro, Vt.

A dance is announced to be held at the Wayside Inn on Monday evening, July 3. A six piece orchestra from Middletown has been engaged to furnish music for dancing. The committee in charge are Alfred Gaskell, the Hon. W. D. Cunningham, George J. Hoonbeck and C. B. Murray.

Clark D. Bunting, bookkeeper of the Holmes brick block store, with Mrs. Bunting and sister, Miss May Peaker, are spending a ten days' vacation at Asbury Park.

Commencing Sunday, June 25, the Rev. Mr. Vandell, graduate of the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, will assume charge as pastor of the Napanoch Reformed Church. Services held every Sunday morning and evening.

The Rev. Walter S. Maines will deliver the baccalaureate sermon to the members of the graduating class at the evening service. Other churches of the village will join in the service at 7:30.

The class of 1916, Ellenville high school, have issued invitations to relatives and friends for the annual commencement exercises the week of June 25, at the high school auditorium.

Mrs. J. R. McLaren, who with her son, Robert Southwick, have occupied an apartment in Mrs. J. M. Clair's residence on Park street the past school year, will return to Grahamsville for the summer and in September will move to New York city, where Mr. McLaren is engaged in business.

Miss Mary Hartwig has been tendered a position in the schools at Woodmere, L. I., with a fine increase in salary which she now receives in the Ellenville schools. Ellenville people will regret the departure of Miss Hartwig from the village schools.

Mrs. U. S. Brundage of Napanoch and Mrs. David Brundage of the village have joined their husbands at Pompton Lakes, N. J., where they have positions with the Dupont people.

Miss Laura Eppel, daughter of Mrs. Alice White Eppel, graduated from one of the Chicago high schools the past week. Many Ellenville friends recall Mrs. Eppel as one of Ellenville's high school graduates a few years ago when her father, the Rev. S. F. White, was pastor of the M. E. Church.

The next meeting of the New York State Branch Woman Suffrage party will be held with Mrs. Henry Horton at Maplewood Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock to adopt a constitution and outline work of the society.

Mrs. Walter M. Brown has been spending several days with her daughter, Mrs. E. D. Montrose, and family at Ulster Heights.

Thomas Thornton and Miss Norma DeVan, students at Cornell, are home for the summer vacation.

The Rev. Donald Boyce has returned from attending the general synod of the Reformed Church, which granted a dispensation for his ordination which will be carried out at his church at Westerlo at an early date.

Mrs. Boyce spent the time of her husband's absence with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Boyce, in Ellenville.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Boquet of Brooklyn have come to their home in Ellenville for the summer.

Mrs. Lathrop and children have joined Mr. Lathrop at Lake Minneapaska for the summer.

Mrs. Nelson N. Moneyenny and daughter, Miss Mollie Moneyenny, with twenty young lady classmates of Miss Moneyenny of class 1914 of Brooklyn, spent the past week at Mohawk Lake.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

I am overhauling a very noisy four cylinder motor with overhead valves and would like to know if reducing the valve lift to three-sixteenths or one-fourth of an inch would make any difference in the noise, the present lift being one-half inch. The cams are also very sharp, which I imagine would cause a great deal of noise, but possibly may be remedied by grinding of the points to make them more round. Also, would this affect the power of the motor, and in what way?

You might decrease the noise by doing this, but you would also cut down the power because the valves would be opened less. This would cut down the charge admitted and lessen the possibilities of properly ridding the cylinders of burned gases.

If the speedometer on my car would register accurately with 35 by 4 1/2 tires, how far would it throw my speedometer off if 36 by 5 tires were put on? How many miles in every ten or in one hundred?

If your speedometer registered correctly with thirty-five inch tires and you add one inch to the diameter by fitting thirty-six inch tires you add 3.14 inches to the circumference of the tire. Of course the speedometer is set to register one mile every 5,280 feet, or every time the wheel turns around approximately 7 1/2 times, although every time the wheel turns when equipped with a one inch greater in diameter than that for which the speedometer is designed the travel is 3.14 inches per turn, or 150.73 feet in 528 turns greater than registered. Thus it will be seen that when your speedometer registers a hundred miles you really will have traveled 102.55 miles, or 2.55 miles more than your indicator registers.

My car carbonizes quickly and smokes a great deal. Do you think a leak proof ring at the top of each piston will do any good?

Very likely this would help, but even better results should be obtained by using a full set of rings.

Would there be any difference in the amount of gasoline consumed in a car going forty miles at the rate of forty miles per hour and the same car on the same trip going ten miles per hour?

There would be a difference in the gasoline consumed going at these two different rates of speed, and the probabilities are that there would be less consumed for traveling the distance at ten miles per hour than there would at forty miles per hour. The reason for this is in the wind resistance. In traveling at ten miles per hour the wind resistance for each square foot of projected area against a vertical transverse plane would be 0.402 pound. At forty miles per hour this resistance has increased to 7.873 pounds. Therefore, if the projected area is twenty-five square feet this pressure amounts to a considerable quantity at a rate of forty miles per hour. The power required to overcome wind resistance can be figured approximately by a formula which is given as follows:

$H. P. = 0.001 P \cdot A \cdot M$

In this formula $H. P.$ is the horsepower required to overcome the wind resistance, P the wind pressure in pounds per square foot over area A , and M is the speed of the car in m. p. h. Thus, assuming a car with a front area of ten square feet and speed of sixty miles per hour, the power required to overcome the resistance alone be 20.8.

What is the maximum speed of two cycle engines?

The maximum speed of the two cycle may be expected to be lower than that of the four cycle, due to the fact that with the increase in speed more of the dead gas will remain in the cylinder.

I have a car which I wish to convert into a speedster. Can you tell me what changes are necessary to secure the most speed out of it?

The weight distribution over the front and rear wheels should be made as nearly equal as possible, so that the car will hold the track and take the turns without upsetting. This rule is followed out in designing cars for racing. The center of gravity is made as low as possible to accomplish the same end. The motor should be balanced by making the reciprocating parts as nearly equal as possible in weight. The crankshaft must be perfectly balanced, the connecting rods to weigh the same—in fact, there must not be more work thrust upon one cylinder than upon another. By reducing the body weight the car will give greater speed. The new body should be such that wind resistance is reduced considerably, for this is one great factor in speed. By reducing the gear ratio still greater speed may be obtained, but the life of the car would be short with a gear ratio of less than three and one-half to one.

Is there such a thing as an internal combustion rotary engine?

There has been a great deal of experimentation in the way of internal combustion rotary engines and also line turbines. In fact, there are dozens of them on file in the patent office. So far none of them has been a financial success.

Will you kindly describe a universal joint and its action?

A universal joint is a mechanism that is designed to have free angular movement with positive rotary movement. Its function is to allow two shafts at varying angles to each other to have a positive driving connection.

Can you tell me the difference, if any, between a torsion, torque, strut and radius rod?

Torsion rods, torque rods, torsion tubes and torque arms are all the same in office. This office is to prevent a live driving axle from twisting axially in response to its own and the vehicle's inertia instead of transmitting the torque of the drive. In other words, all of these devices are to resist the torque reaction. The torque is the twisting effort of the driving means, whose object is to turn the wheels. There are two general forms of torque members, the torsion tube and the torque arm. The torsion tube is a tubular enclosure for the driving shaft, which is usually yoked or otherwise pivoted to the frame at its front. The reaction of the axle in driving causes it to press on the underside of the frame. The reaction in braking is in the reverse direction and causes it to pull downward on the frame. A torque arm has a similar mission, but it is in the form of an arm, either to one side or directly under the driving shaft.

The radius rod or strut rod is a member designed to keep the axle in place against its tendency to move forward under driving stress or to move backward when the brakes are applied. The terms are synonymous.

Would it be better for starting my motor to shorten the intake manifold and use a cowl gasoline tank? Would it improve the pulling to any extent?

Probably, beneficial results as far as motor operation is concerned would come from raising the carburetor and shortening the intake, as you would give last chance for condensation of the fuel, but it is doubtful if the results obtained would warrant the expense and trouble.

The gasoline tank on my six cylinder car is on the rear end of the car, and the gasoline is forced up to an auxiliary tank on the dash. It then flows down to the carburetor. I also have a four cylinder car, and the gasoline tank is under the front seat, and the gasoline flows from there to the carburetor. When running very slowly for twenty minutes in hot weather the gasoline will stop flowing to the carburetor, and the car stops. If I wait five minutes the gasoline will begin to flow again and everything will work properly. Both cars work exactly alike in this respect. Can you give me some advice on this?

The fact that two cars act the same renders this a very mysterious state of affairs, but there are two explanations which may fit the case. The first explanation is that there are air locks in the piping. It very often happens that in installing the gasoline line large vertical bends are allowed to occur in the piping. When this happens there are certain times when the gasoline will be drawn away and what corresponds to a large bubble will form in the bend. The result is that the gasoline is choked and can not flow until this bubble is broken, which occurs due to the weight of the gasoline after a few moments' wait. When the gasoline is again drawn through the piping another bubble is apt to form and the same occurrence happens again.

The second explanation for your trouble is that instead of the gasoline ceasing to flow the condition of running on a rich mixture for twenty minutes results in flooded engine, which will not again operate until sufficient gasoline has evaporated to bring the mixture down to the range of explosiveness. Above and below this range a mixture of air and gasoline will not explode. With the ordinary carburetor the auxiliary air valve will remain closed at very low speeds, with the result that practically all of the suction of the motor falls upon the jet and nothing but raw gasoline is drawn into the manifold. After running a short time in this condition, with more gasoline being drawn into the manifold than is being used the motor is choked and stops. When you wait for five minutes, as you say, the accumulated gasoline evaporates, with the result that an explosive mixture is again formed and the car will run properly until the same condition is again set up.

The remedy for the trouble is either to make a better adjustment on the air valve or to install some device admitting extra air to the manifold. A number of these are on the market and can be attached by simply tapping into the intake manifold and by installing a control system to the steering column or a convenient position in the car. Whenever the mixture becomes super rich, so that it is necessary to dilute it with an extra supply of air, this can be done from the driver's seat. Such an installation not only guards against the trouble which you mentioned, but also permits a reduction in your gasoline bills by making a leaner mixture for higher speeds at which the car is practically continuously run during a tour through the country.

GET AFTER POP FLIES

Manager Jones Wants His Men to Catch Texas Leaguers.

Shows Outfielder Marsans How Trick Can Be Done and Cuban Star Grows Wise—Fly Chasers Must Be Ready to Rush In.

There will be no loafing on the part of Brownie outfielders on pop flies or Texas leaguers in back of the infield, as long as Fielder Jones is directing the plays of the Sportsman's park team. The fly chasers should and must be ready at all times to rush in to get short pops that frequently elude a pursuing infielder who is running with his back to the diamond in an effort to make the catch. Jones has instructed his men to this effect.

During practice session the other day a pop fly was hit into the air by one of the rookies, which dropped just behind the infield. Lavan tried desperately to make the catch, but could not judge the ball, and missed it by a few inches. Marsans, who was playing center, started in at the crack of the bat, but suddenly stopped when he discovered Lavan dashing wildly out into the field to make the catch. When the side had been retired and Marsans was heading toward the bench, Jones motioned Armando to his side and queried why he had stopped on the pop fly.

"Why, I thought Lavan would make the catch," answered Marsans. "You outfielders will have to take more chances on short flies than you do," returned Jones.

"You would have made a good catch of that ball if you continued to come in," said the Browns' manager.

"Fewer Texas leaguers will drop behind the infield if you fellows take more chances and attempt to make a catch," continued Fielder.

"Well, if I continued running I might have collided with Lavan and either or both of us might have been injured," answered Marsans.

"Nothing of the sort," said Jones. "We have a field captain who is appointed for no other purpose than calling to the men on such plays."

"It is much easier for an outfielder to come in at breakneck speed on a

Shortstop Lavan.

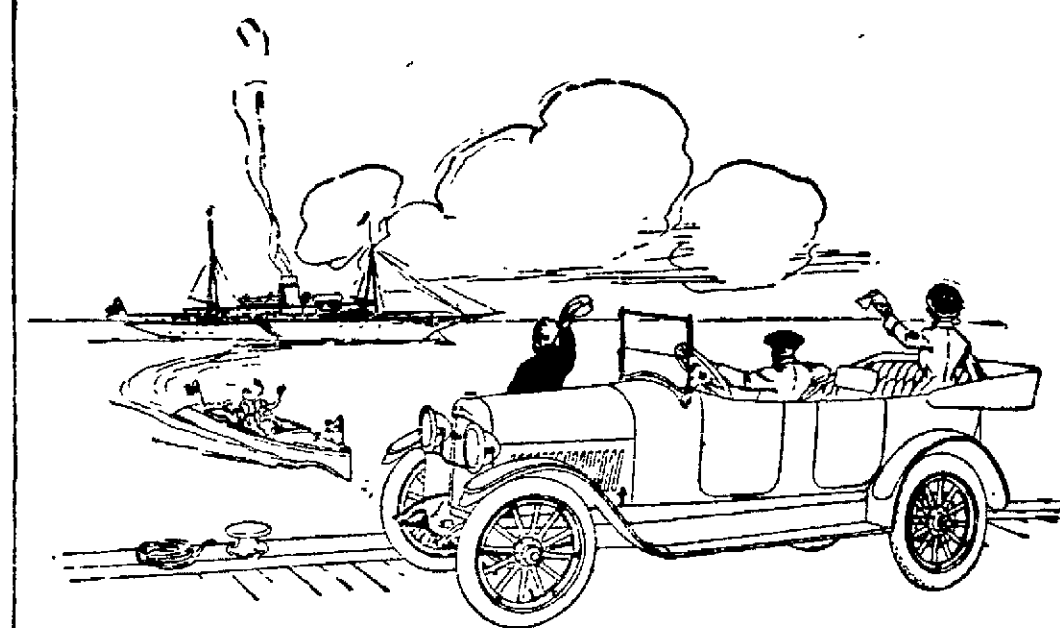

pon fly than for an infielder to be dashing wildly with his back to the diamond trying to make a catch," continued Jones.

About this time Marsans had been convinced that he had used poor judgment, and continued on to the bench. In the next inning or two that followed a similar fly was sent up into the air. Lavan again started backward and Marsans was dashing in to make the catch, and Lavan stopped. Marsans made the catch easily.

This proved that Jones' baseball knowledge was correct.

THEY SURELY ARE WONDERFUL LITTLE WORKERS—
FREEMAN ONE-CENT-A-WORD "WANT" ADLETS

BITS OF SHRAPNEL FROM COMPANY M

Company M is now an infantry company of the U. S. A., but the boys feel about the same, thank you. Yet it is plain that watchful waiting is not a popular proposition at the armory.

The recruits are making good soldiers. Not only are they a lot of young men of good calibre but they lend themselves readily to discipline because of their interest in the new game of war. Hence, the splendid work done by Lieutenants Dittus and Cashin and the non-commissioned officers showed up quickly in the street debuts of the rookies in uniform.

While not generally known, it is a fact that the military power vested in the militia officers is considerable and it might be well to state that any derogatory remarks concerning the men or the uniform may be dealt with severely. The offenders could be placed under arrest if the commanding officer so desired. To the credit of Kingston let it be said that nothing of this nature has thus far cropped up except one woman who, it is hoped was only joking, yelled to one of the men as the company passed McEntee street Thursday night, "You little devil, I hope you get shot." This cordial greeting is said to have come from a relative of one of the privates who became incensed because the young man enlisted.

A game of Grab with part of various kits as prizes was played on the armory floor Friday afternoon when the men were lined up and every article of equipment accounted for. This was done to straighten out several packs which had been mixed up since the memorable battle of Alesan. Everybody got the blanket and other equipment to which he was entitled after a half hour's hard work sorting. Each article of a soldier's kit bears the number assigned to him and which is also stamped on his blanket and rifle.

A good story of the mobilization comes from Hudson, where a banker became so obsessed with the thought of getting into action that he paid little attention to details. At the time, it is Captain Cranston who tells the story, the man was dressed in evening dress to go out to dinner when the call came. In his absorption, he started to the lavatory and when he started to leave, pushed the button. "He meant all right," said the captain, "but he pushed the button of the shower bath!"

An old man of sixty demanded to be admitted to the Company today, stating that his name had been published in the papers and, hence, he was entitled to go to the front. The officers had hard work convincing him that he could not get in.

The members of Company M are taking in the baseball game this afternoon at the Athletic field, where Kingston and Tivoli are trying conclusions on the diamond. The gardeners are guests of the management.

Many organizations in the city have asked the privilege of making gifts to soldiers and many little remembrances have found their way to the armory and are much appreciated by the men. Most of these take the form of religious articles which range from seapulars to testaments.

The Corpus Christi feast, transferred from Thursday to Sunday in the Catholic Church of the United States, that all the faithful may take part in it, will be solemnly celebrated this Sunday in the immaculate Conception Church. The High Mass with exposition of Blessed Sacrament will begin at 10 a. m. After mass the solemn procession will proceed to the three altars, prepared at the church grounds. All the church societies in their respective uniforms will be in procession. At each altar there will be singing of the beginning of the Gospel of the four evangelists, and benediction with the Blessed Sacrament will be at each altar. The procession will terminate at church, where from the high altar for the fourth time benediction will be given. This will be a most impressive feast as all the parishioners will take part in it to outwardly express their faith and love towards our saviour ever present in the Blessed Sacrament.

Could Not Go to Catskill.

At the eleventh hour it was found absolutely impossible for the Kingston Symphony Society to give the advertised concert in Catskill last evening. Harry Relyea, the clarinet soloist of the orchestra, was taken suddenly and seriously ill with what it was feared was ptomaine poisoning. As each of the symphonic movements to be played in the evening—four in all—calls for a clarinet solo of greater or less length, it was an impossibility to give the concert without a solo performer on this instrument, accustomed to symphonic work, and New York was telegraphed in the hope of making the concert. It was too late to secure such a man from New York and it was found necessary to postpone the concert until next week. The date will be announced in Monday evening's Freeman.

SUMMER PORCHES

The Luxury of Living Outdoors in Hot Weather.

WHAT PAINT WILL DO.

Get Out Your Old Chairs, Buy Two New Wickers, Give Them a Green Coat and Then Dress Them Up in Gay Chintzes.

It seems a pity that all country homes are not built with roomy, spacious piazzas. After all, the principal reason that any one has for living in the suburbs and going through all the trouble of commuting is because he wants to live in the country. Of course six months in the year it is too cold to sit out of doors, but when spring comes the suburbanite wants to enjoy the country to the utmost. He cannot do this by sitting indoors, certainly. He wants to read his paper and smoke his pipe where he can see nature's beauties spread all out before his eyes—namely, on the porch. Modern architects are realizing more and more the need for big porches, no matter how small the house. Of course the suburbanite who owns his own home can always add to the porches if he wishes. But the others must make the most of what they have and do the best they can to make their piazza cozy and comfortable, no matter how small it may be.

You women who live in the country will find that a can of two of paint and a bolt of pretty chintz will do much to transform your porch furniture. If you have no comfortable chairs for piazza use do buy one or two. They need not be expensive pieces, but be sure they are comfortable and have pretty lines. The wicker or reed furniture is really the most attractive for verandas, and it is not at all expensive.

You need not worry if you have two or three pieces of one kind and a couple of pieces of another variety. After you have given them all a coat of the same paint and made chintz cushioned seats and backs for them they will look enough alike to fool any casual eye. Besides, no one expects rigid formality in porch decorations.

If your house is white or gray you will find that green porch furniture will look best. Give all the chairs, tables and settees a coat of green paint and one of green enamel paint. The chintz for green furniture should contrast with it, and a figure with a good deal of red in it will be found most effective.

It may be wisest to have a cheap upholsterer make the seat cushions and backs if you are afraid to tackle so tricky a job. Have them made with some white goods as a cover. Then you can yourself make slip covers of the chintz for them. The reason why it is better not to have the chintz put right on as the first cover of the cushions is because it may soil very quickly, being where the street dust can easily reach it. If the chintz is made into slip covers they can be removed and washed when soiled.

If your house is any other color except white or gray brown porch furniture is prettiest. So you can paint your furnishings brown and use almost any gayly colored, pretty bright chintz for cushions.

TRIALS OF AN ORCHESTRA.

Its Labors Marked an Epoch in Our Musical History.

Back in the eighteen forties a number of travelling orchestras came to America from Europe.

The most famous was the Germania, which gave its first concert in New York Oct. 5, 1848. The seed fell on stony ground at first. In Philadelphia Arch Street hall was rented for $10, Jan. 1, 1849—the receipts were exactly $9.50. In the middle of the performance the manager of the hall appeared and threatened to turn out the lights if the rental was not paid immediately. To a man the orchestra voted that the lights be turned out, and the concert ceased.

Later this organization was more successful. During the next six weeks it gave 500 concerts in the north, west and south, besides collaborating in oratorios and with local choral societies. Jenny Lind sang with them at times, and they were joined by Henrietta Sonntag, Tedesco, August Kreissmann, Ole Bull and others now and then.

They disbanded in 1854, but wherever one of their number settled a contagion point was established from which a love and appreciation of music radiated throughout the community. This seed scattering was of incalculable value to the spread of musical taste in America. It marked an epoch in our musical history.—New York American.

OUR FIRST PRESIDENT.

Only Ten of the Thirteen States Took Part in His Election.

New York state had no part in the election of the first president of the United States. For some years following the establishment of the federal government the legislatures of most of the states chose the presidential electors, the people voting for them only indirectly, their choice being expressed by their votes for legislators. A deadlock between the senate and the assembly prevented the selection of electors from New York state. Rhode Island and North Carolina had not yet ratified the constitution, so Washington was elected the first time by the votes of only ten of the thirteen states.

New York city was the scene of the first inauguration, however. Washington took the oath on the portico of Federal hall, on the present site of the subterranean, at Wall and Nassau streets, April 30, 1789. Immediately following this ceremony he retired within the building and delivered an address to congress, which met in Federal hall in those days. John Adams, the second president, also addressed congress in person, but Jefferson broke the custom which President Wilson has revived. Jefferson stigmatized that form of address as monarchical and put his message in writing.—New York Sun.

Origin of Dukes.

The word "duke" is from the Latin "dux," a leader. In early Saxon times the commanders of armies were called dukes—i. e., the leaders of the soldiery. In other words, the first duke was the first best fighting man. No regard was had to ancestry or present attainments or any other sort of thing beyond the simple matter of warlike efficiency. Naturally the leader of the fighting would, when the fighting was over, come in for the lion's share of the spoils and "honors," and naturally again the rest of the folks would "look up" to him, and by degrees his superiority would be imparted to his family, and a "nobility" would spring into being. It all rested, to start with, on brute force and animal courage combined with cunning in clubbing and thrusting.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke).
New York, June 24.—Old timers like to tell the story of the last battle between Kid McCoy and Peter Maher—the exhibition bout during which McCoy knocked out the Irishman with one punch.

Eight or ten years ago a benefit card was arranged. The promoters figured that it would add to the gaiety of the occasion if they could get on McCoy and Maher. Both practically had retired from active ring work, and so the folks behind the affair used a bit of subterfuge in making the match.

An essay was sent to McCoy. "Say, kid," he said, "I understand Peter Maher's been saying that the knockout you scored over him in Coney Island in 1909 was a fluke. Says if he ever got another chance at you he'd knock you flatter'n a pancake."

Pete says that, hey?" bellowed McCoy. "Why, the old stuff! Say, if I ever got another crack at him he wouldn't last five minutes."

"Oh, by the way, kid," said the tempter, as an afterthought, "there's going to be a benefit entertainment in a week or two. Would you mind going on for a few rounds?"

Ruse Successful.
"Not at all," answered the Kid. "And, say, if you can do it, get Maher for me—oh, please, do get Maher."

And then the emissary went to Peter and nonchalantly remarked that McCoy is around boasting about his easy victory over you in Coney Island.

Naturally, Peter flared right up. He spoke his thoughts concerning Mr. Kid McCoy and asserted heatedly that he ever got another chance at the Kid he'd bust him right in hall with one punch.

Then the "trouser-up" dropped a remark about the benefit entertainment and added:

"Kid McCoy is going to donate his services. We're trying to find some one to box him. Can you suggest anyone?"

"Can I?" blurted out Peter. "Can I? Well I sure can. And his name is Peter Maher. You'll let me box him, d'ye hear?"

And so the bout was made. When the rivals entered the ring that night it was apparent to everyone that both were not in real fighting shape. Also it was noticeable that both men instead of exhibiting the friendliness that usually exists between boxers in a benefit performance, were glaring at each other savagely.

"No Rough Stuff!"—Referee.
The referee brought them together and told them that the affair was to be an exhibition only.

"No rough stuff," he cautioned them. "Just box and don't hurt each other."

McCoy pointed to Maher and said: "You're the one who's supposed to be the champion of the ring, and you're supposed to be a slugger."

"No," said Peter, "we're just boxing here."

"Is that right, McCoy, and don't you say anything funny with me," retorted Peter.

The fight continued. The pair circled the ring, but neither offered to swing. The round was about half over without a lead being made.

When McCoy, fox that he always was, half turned toward the audience. He seemed unconscious of the fact that he was supposed to be fighting Maher.

Maher watched him narrowly a moment, figuring it was a trick. But the Kid continued oblivious to his ring foe.

"The Punch Slipped!"—McCoy.
Peter advanced closer and closer. This was an opening that was too good to miss. Peter you'll remember hadn't forgotten the stigma of that Coney Island defeat. Nor was he forgetting about what McCoy is supposed to have said about him. Revenge is quite sweet.

Peter drew back the mighty right that had sent so many men into dreamland, drew it back cautiously and so as to get the full power into it when it swung. His arm shot for the Kid's head with the wheel right of the Maher body behind it—but the blow never landed.

Like a streak of lightning, the Kid wheeled around. This was the chance he had craved. His whirl got him out of range of the Maher "Haymaker." As the wallop whizzed past him, and Maher, off balance, was in range, McCoy lashed out a right that caught Peter flush on the jaw. The crash was heard in all parts of the house.

A fraction of a second after the blow landed, and while Maher, although toppling, was still on his feet, McCoy turned to the audience, a mischievous smile on his face, and shouted:

"Lookit, ladies and gentlemen, lookit Peter. He's dead—and I'm so sorry. But the punch slipped."

When Peter finally was revived, he felt his aching head and muttered: "And the devil said 'no rough stuff'."

Hot Liners.
(By Frank G. Menke.)
The Thames is dyed a deep crimson today.

The confident Robins received a shock when the Giants invaded Flatbush and tore their feathers off.

The Yankees are nibbling at the top rung of the ladder again. The double defeat administered to the Nationals has put them a game and a half from the lead.

Boston tried hard to check the Phillies. But with "King" Alexander hurling it was futile. At that Moran and his men had to go eleven innings to get the victory.

It isn't often two hits win games but that was all the Red Sox and Cubs needed to polish off the Athletics and Reds.

The Cardinals bested the Pirates in a slugging bee.

George Foster.
Flash of Best Form of Season.

Tonsillitis is evidently good for George Foster, the twirler for the Boston Red Sox. George had not shown much form this season and was out of the game with a bad attack of the throat trouble and was just convalescing when he stepped onto the mound and pitched a no-hit game against the New York Yankees the other day.

Foster pitched masterful ball and the only blow in the game that threatened to become a base hit was made by Franklin Baker, who drove a long fly to right field, where Harry Hooper made a nice catch of it.

Most Easily Fooled.
It is much easier for a young man to fool his own mother than it is for him to fool any other woman.

COMMON AMERICAN BIRDS

INTERESTING INFORMATION ABOUT THEM SUPPLIED BY THE BUREAU OF BIOLOGICAL SURVEY OF THE UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

PURPLE MARTIN
(Progne subis)

Length, about eight inches.
Range: Breeds throughout the United States and southern Canada, south to central Mexico; winters in South America.

Habits and economic status: This is the largest as it is one of the most beautiful of the swallow tribe. It formerly built its nests in cavities of trees, as it still does in wild districts, but learning that man was a friend it soon adopted domestic habits. Its presence about the farm can often be secured by erecting houses suitable for nesting sites and protecting them from usurpation by the English sparrow, and every effort should be made to increase the number of colonies of this very useful bird. The boxes should be at a reasonable height, say 15 feet from the ground, and made inaccessible to cats. A colony of these birds on a farm makes great inroads upon the insect population, as the birds not only themselves feed upon insects but rear their young upon the same diet. Fifty years ago in New England it was not uncommon to see colonies of 50 pairs of martins, but most of them have now vanished for no apparent reason except that the martin houses have decayed and have not been renewed. More than three-fourths of this bird's food consists of wasps, bugs, and beetles, their importance being in the order given. The beetles include several species of harmful weevils, as the clover-leaf weevils and the nut weevils. Besides these are many crane flies, moths, May flies, and dragon flies.
